British Ports Struck, Other Unions Follow

LONDON (AP) — Striking longshoremen shut down all major British ports today to protest the jailing of five London dock workers for defying the nation's new labor court. Thousands of workers in other industries struck in sympathy.

By noon most of the country's 42,000 longshoremen had joined the stoppage that began Friday in London, Liverpool and Hull. Men in Southhampton, Manchester, Glasgow, Bristol, Swansea, Ipswich and other ports walked out today.

Miners, printers, automobile workers and truck drivers also struck today in a massive show of support for the jailed men.

Prime Minister Edward Heath scheduled a meeting with leaders of the 9-million-member Trades Union Congress, seeking a solution for the growing crisis.

Motor Freight

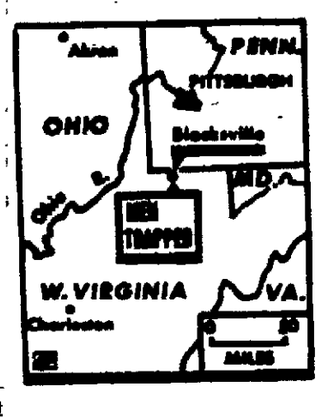

The leader of the truck drivers' union predicted a total stoppage of motor freight within 48 hours. Nearly 5,000 miners walked out in South Wales, Scotland and Yorkshire.

Striking printers prevented publication of London newspapers Sunday and again today. More than 400 fish market porters walked out in Grimbsy.

The pound dropped sharply on foreign exchange markets, and prices tumbled on the stock exchange. The dock strike was certain to reduce the exports which Britain needs to bolster her ailing economy, and the sympathy strikes will cut production if they continue.

The five dock workers were ordered to London's Pentonville Prison on Friday for refusing to obey an order from the National Industrial Relations Court to halt the illegal picketing of a container freight company. They were the first union members jailed by the court, which was set up earlier this year under the new Industrial Relations Act.

The Trades Union Congress planned to urge Heath to release the longshoremen and suspend the act in order to defuse the crisis. However, the government's attitude is that the men are in prison not for their union activities but for defying a court order and it cannot interfere with the judiciary.

Drilling Delays Hinder Mine Rescue Attempt

BLACKSVILLE, W. Va. (AP) — Rescue workers encountered problems today which delayed drilling of a five-inch hole into a burning coal mine where nine men have been trapped since Saturday night.

Meanwhile, hope faded that the miners would be found alive.

A predawn equipment breakdown caused one delay in the drilling. Then, later in the morning, the bit became stuck and the drilling again came to a halt.

When the bit stuck the shaft had been drilled to a depth of 624 feet, and a hole 730 feet deep was needed to intercept the mine at the point where the men were believed to have been trapped.

Chances Slim

There has been no word from the nine since shortly after the fire started. Officials of the Consolidation Coal Co.'s Blacksville No. 1 mine said Sunday night chances the men would be found alive were "quite dim."

"I don't think I am stating anything but a fact," said John Corcoran, Consolidation president. He called the situation a tragedy.

Officials said 31 of the 40 men doing maintenance work in the four-mile mine reached safety within minutes after the fire broke out.

The bore hole was being drilled in an attempt to reach the men or possibly communicate with them. Failing that, officials hoped to learn something about conditions in the mine 650 feet below the rolling hills of this West Virginia-Pennsylvania border community.

An official of the U.S. Bureau of Mines said temperatures in the immediate area of the fire probably were between 2,500 and 3,000 degrees fahrenheit.

Corcoran said at a news conference he felt conditions for rescuing the trapped miners were not favorable.

Efforts Hampered

Rescue efforts have been hampered by the fire which continues to burn in the soft coal veins that underlie the area.

Efforts to put the fire out with foam have been stymied because workers were unable to get behind the flames.

The fire started when a heavy piece of mining machinery being relocated in the main corridor about a mile from the lone elevator shaft hit a live electrical wire, generating sparks.

The fire had been localized Sunday night in an area of about 400 square feet less than a mile from the mine entrance, Consolidation officials said.

Corcoran told newsmen that some members of the missing men's families were keeping a vigil around the entrance to the mine.

Officials said more than 100 rescue workers, divided into 14 teams, were involved in the search.

Always Hope

"There is always hope," said Leonard Pnakovich, vice president and spokesman for the United Mine Workers of America.

Pnakovich placed the blame for the fire squarely with the company. He accused Consolidation of being negligent in failing to enforce a state mining law requiring evacuation of miners from an area where heavy machinery is being moved.

Corcoran answered. "There is a legal requirement...that workmen do not go in by the air currents where a machine is being moved. It would appear that on this particular occasion some of the men were where the machine was being moved. Why they were there, we don't know."

The trapped miners were identified as Terrance Stoneking, 29, and Frederick Phillips, 42, both of Mount Morris, Pa.; and Justin A. Beach Jr., 23, Conrad J. Belt, 34, Billy Murray, 37, Roy Sisler, 24, Roy Dalton, 42, Kenneth Haynes, 21, and Robert Tressler, 32, all of Morgantown.

Syria Pressured To Oust Soviets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Syrian government is under pressure to follow Egypt's lead and expel Soviet military advisers, but the Syrian Communist party has threatened to quit the government if it does, the right-wing Beirut newspaper Al Hayat reported today.

It said Nasserite groups in the coalition government dominated by the Baath Socialist party are pressing for expulsion of the Russians as an "expression of solidarity and coordination with Egypt."

Syria is a partner with Egypt and Libya in the Federation of Arab Republics, and pro-Egyptian parties hold eight of the 28 Syrian cabinet posts.

President Hafez Assad of Syria was reported by the Arab press last month to have returned from a visit to the Soviet Union as disillusioned as Egypt's President Anwar Sadat with Moscow's reluctance to supply offensive weapons to the Arabs.

Red Ministers

Khaled Bakdash, secretary-general of the Syrian Communist party, threatened in a note to Assad to withdraw the two Communist ministers from the cabinet if the Soviets were expelled, Al Hayat reported.

Since the Egyptian expulsion announcement Tuesday, the Communists have boycotted meetings of the Syrian National Front, which groups all partners in the coalition, Al Hayat said.

An estimated 3,000 Soviet experts are serving with Syria's 111,000-man army.

Meanwhile, the Israeli Cabinet on Sunday discussed Egypt's latest statement on nonalignment and peace negotiations, but officials in Jerusalem doubted it represented any major shift in policy.

Will Not Surrender

Mohamed Hassan el Zayyat, the Cairo's government's chief spokesman, said Saturday Egypt will not align itself with any major bloc, will not surrender to Israel and feels that to discuss peace while Israel holds Arab land taken in the 1967 war amounts to capitulation.

El Zayyat's remarks dampened the anticipation of some observers who expected a more conciliatory attitude from Egypt following President Anwar Sadat's expulsion last week of Soviet military advisers from Egypt.

Premier Golda Meir addresses the Knesset, Israeli's parliament, on Wednesday, and sources in Jerusalem speculated that once again she would call for peace talks without preconditions, such as an advance commitment by Israel to give up all occupied territory.

One Israeli newspaper, Haaretz, suggested that the government give "an expression of willingness in principle to recognize Sadat...as a partner for a political settlement."

But another paper, Maariv, said that "for the moment this is nothing but talk and a repetition of peace conditions that contradict Israel's vital interests."

The Israeli Cabinet also rejected the U.N. Security Council demand that it immediately release six Syrian and Lebanese officers captured in the June 21 raid in southern Lebanon. The cabinet countered by repeating a call for a general prisoner exchange with Egypt, which holds 210 Israelis; Syria, which holds three, and Lebanon, Israel holds 711 Arab POWs.

Nixon, New Japanese Premier Agree to Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka has accepted an invitation for wide-ranging talks with President Nixon in Hawaii Aug. 31 and Sept. 1.

No agenda was announced for the meeting, which the official language of a joint Sunday night announcement billed as "an exchange of views" between the two Pacific allies.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said there will be a "full range of discussion of U.S.-Japanese relations, including trade."

The meeting will come less than two weeks after Nixon's expected nomination by his party to run for a second term.

For Tanaka, who was elected earlier this month, the meeting with Nixon will precede Japanese diplomatic talks with China and the Soviet Union.

"We feel it is an appropriate time to meet with the prime minister," said Ziegler in response to a question following the announcement.

The Hawaii gathering will be the second summit for the two powers this year. Nixon met in San Clemente, Calif., in January with Tanaka's predecessor, Eisaku Sato.

The January meeting was intended to soothe the feelings of the Japanese who were buffeted by the administration's announcements last summer of direct approaches to mainland China and of economic moves sharply affecting U.S. trading partners.

The adinistration last August imposed a 10-per-cent surcharge on imports without advising Japan, the United States' second-largest trading partner.

The new summit is seen in part as a continuation of the January effort to better relations that were ruffled by the moves of 1971.

Nixon will be accompanied by Secretary of State William P. Rogers and presidential national-security adviser Dr. Henry A. Kissinger.

Candidates for No. 2 Spot Exchange Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice presidential candidates are getting in some target practice in advance of the official beginning of the election campaign.

And the new chairman of the Democratic party says the party's financial position is much improved for the 1972 campaign, although they still haven't figured out how to pay all of the multi-million dollar debt left from the 1968 campaign.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, who was named Saturday by President Nixon as his running mate for November, criticized Democratic positions on amnesty, the draft and marijuana in a speech at Anchorage, Alaska Sunday.

He said voters will have a "clear choice" between candidates for the first time, adding, "It would be a tragedy if, after four years, the voters did not return Richard Nixon for another four years."

The Democratic vice presidential candidate, Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, went after Agnew in an appearance on ABC television's 'Issues and Answers' program, saying the Vice President "gets right down into the grassroots of a campaign, sometimes into the mud."

Welcome Debate

He said he would welcome a debate with Agnew.

Eagleton predicted that President Nixon would bring home all American ground troops from Vietnam by Election Day, although the war would still be an election issue.

He also indicated he has so far been rebuffed in attempts to meet with AFL-CIO President George Meany to try to win him to the Democratic side. But he held out the possibility that Meany still would take "a second look."

Agnew told 350 persons at a $100-a-ticket cocktail party in Anchorage that Democratic presidential candidate George S. McGovern proposes a "blanket amnesty" for draft evaders that dishonors Americans who have died in Vietnam.

On marijuana, he said that while Democrats "say they don't want to legalize marijuana, they on the other hand talk about regulation, which implies a kind of legalization."

Republican Complacency

He warned against Republican complacency over Nixon's lead in the polls over McGovern. "We must remember that only a few months ago he (McGovern) showed only 5 to 10 per cent in the polls and now he is the nominee of the other party."

Jean Westwood, new chairman of the Democratic National Committee, told newsmen in Custer, S.D. that the 19-hour Democratic telethon earlier this month netted only about $1.5 million instead of the $5 million that had been forecast.

Hanoi Getting Fuel Through New Pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon sources report that fresh supplies of motor fuel apparently have started flowing into North Vietnam through a new pipeline from South China.

In addition, U.S. reconnaissance planes recently located a new petroleum-storage depot tying into the pipeline. The depot is said to be relatively near the Chinese border, which might inhibit U.S. bombing attacks against it.

From Pinghsiang the new pipeline runs across the North Vietnamese border and reaches Haiduong, east of Hanoi.

U.S. minefields have stopped Soviet tankers from reaching North Vietnamese ports where they used to unload about 50,000 tons of motor fuel and oil monthly.

Notes Filed From Peking

Chinese Pleased With Egyptian Ouster of Russians

EDITOR'S NOTE—Wes Gallagher, president of The Associated Press, is in China to negotiate an exchange of news and photos with Hsinhua, the Chinese news agency. He filed these notes Sunday.

By WES GALLAGHER

PEKING (AP) — Ousting of the Russian advisers from Egypt has been received with considerable satisfaction here, as showing what happens to those receiving Soviet aid because of Soviet "Socialist imperialism."

The Chinese recall their own experience when they refused to bow to Soviet demands: Russia withdrew the technicians and help it had sent to China.

In conversations the Chinese emphasize what they consider the key difference in aid they provide other nations and the way the Russians provided aid. They say China wants to encourage Socialist revolution but that each country must develop its own kind of this and be independent, not joining any bloc. The Soviets, in their eyes, provide aid only if it gives further Soviet control. They cite the Czechs in the Eastern Bloc as examples of the Soviet way.

China is a land of infinite contradictions and contrasts, defying generalizations or definitions—particularly by instant experts. Chinese officials repeatedly refer to this country as underdeveloped, but they concede there are basic differences between China and countries in other parts of Asia or in Africa.

China is far different, with a cultural history going back thousands of years, impressive universities, thousands of trained technicians, creative scientists, a massive disciplined work force.

American computer scientists from Yale and Carnegie-Mellon universities who are lecturing here say they have been surprised by Chinese advances in this field—that they are less than 18 months behind the United States in the most advanced computer theory and are rapidly closing this gap. They add that the Chinese are farther behind in programming, peripheral equipment and mass-manufacturing techniques, but they believe the Chinese could build a single computer to suit any needed purpose.

The Chinese airline is very safe because it does not fly in thunderstorms around Peking or en route. Our party, en route from Canton to Peking, was grounded overnight at Chengchou, the capital of Honan province, because of storms.

One passenger said that in three flights to Peking he had never reached this city without one grounding. This is apparently due to a lack of equip-

Cardboard Box Creates Handy Addition to Desk

BY CAPPY DICK

A Jot-It-Down note paper holder is easy for a boy or girl to make. Also serving as a holder for a ball point pen, this gadget will be a handy addition to your study desk at home.

Start by finding a cardboard box of suitable size. Cut it to the shape shown in figure one and glue a panel across the bottom part of the open side. On this panel you may letter the words "Jot-It Down," or, if you wish, simply leave the panel plain.

In either case, the outside of the box should be covered with fancy paper pasted in place to make it as decorative as possible.

The measurements in figure one suggest a good size for the box.

Figure two shows how to attach the clip-cap of a ball point pen to the side of the box. Make a hole in that side and slip the clip of the cap through it.

Cut a supply of papers three and a fourth inches wide and four and a quarter inches long to stack in the box.

It will be easy to remove a sheet of this paper whenever you want to write a note.

Tomorrow: Push-through tick-tack-toe, a new version!

Oriental Decorating Blends With Today

China has long been famous for its fireworks and fortune cookies. Today it's making big noises in two fashion areas — home furnishings and women's apparel.

How to blend the mysterious culture of the east with the decorating dictates of the western world was the design challenge faced by Kroehler Mfg. Co.'s Display Coordinator Donald H. Opper recently.

The challenge was compounded even further because the company's "East Meets West" room is also designed to help apartment dwellers make their apartments distinctive from the single sisters in 2B and the family with four kids upstairs.

It's just one in a series of model rooms based on true-to-life living areas found in actual apartments in three geographic areas, including Chicago, a Washington, D.C. suburb, and Miami. "East Meets West" is based on a living room floor plan from Presidential Towers in Adelphi, Md. Close to Washington, Adelphi is home to many employees in the national's capitol.

Weekend Home

Opper, in describing the room, suggests that it's the weekend home of a U.S. Senator. Subtle sophistication was his goal and the soothing grandeur of ancient China became his decorating direction.

One shortcoming of apartment living is that the resident has to make every inch of space work — and if it can work in more ways than one then so much the better.

The room serves three distinctive functions and solutions to space saving are as simple as one; two, three. The room was split into three parts. Opper delegated the formal entertaining and seating area to one end of the room. A work area is in the center part of the room.

There is a French reproduction writing desk and chair against one wall. If the "Senator" requires a larger desk area, he can pull up a chair to the Orient-inspired table placed in back of the sofa. This parson's like table can also serve as a buffet during informal dinner parties. Sit down dining is reserved for the other end of the room.

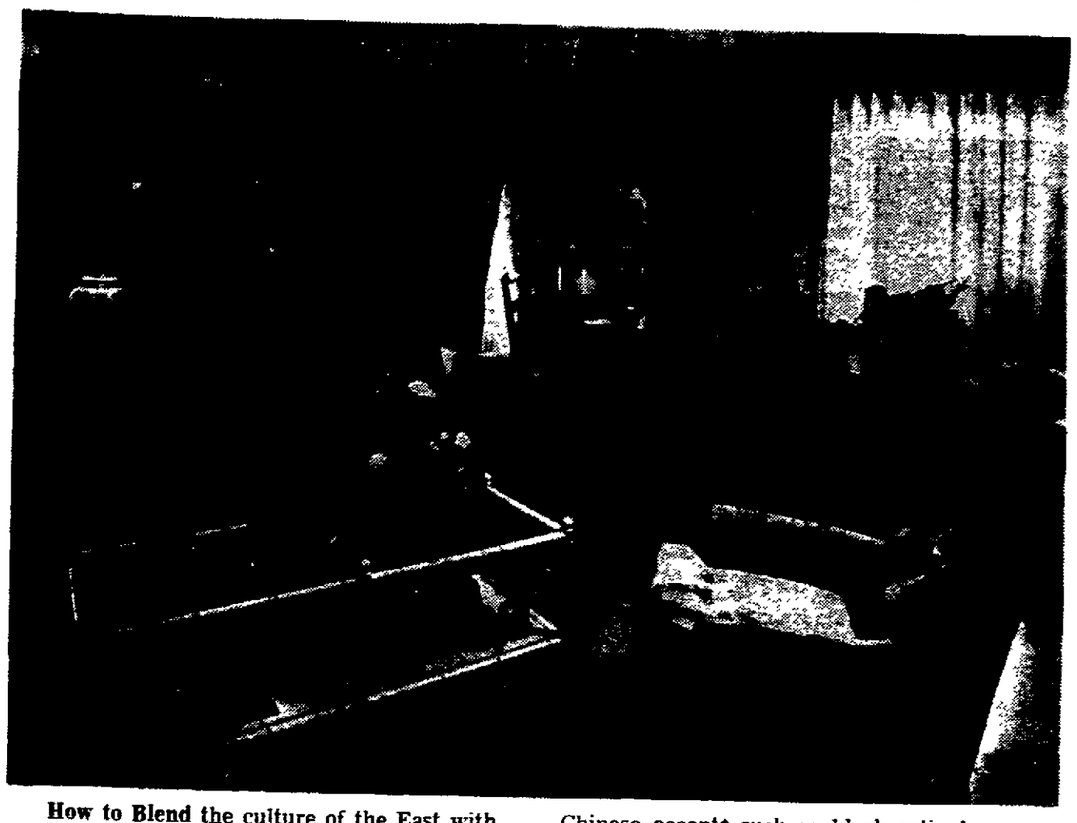

Focal Point

The focal point of the formal seating area is the sofa. It incorporates traditional Chinese accents such as black satin lacquer finish on the base and lotus-shaped feet. Welting accents the loose back and seat cushions as well as the tuxedo arms. The overall length of the sofa is 93 inches.

Opper selected the piece for his room confident that Orient-inspired furniture blends into almost all settings and is particularly dramatic when used as accent pieces to traditional styles.

In "East Meets West" the sofa is featured in a new print fabric called "Of Birds and Dragons". The fabric has a lemon yellow background and is patterned with peacocks and willow trees in pink, blue and olive.

Oriental vases and plates are scattered throughout the room and serve as colorful accents. The majority of them pick up colors from the new fabrics such as the lush blue of the pale blue velvet on the Signature chair. Its tall and shapely form features a sculptured back and deep button tufting.

Hell Has No Fury Like Feminist Split

BY DEE WEDEMEYER

NEW YORK (AP) — Feminist Betty Friedan, who predicted a male backlash as the result of female chauvinism in the woman's liberation movement, has run into a backlash of her own.

"This seems to be a case of hell has no fury like a woman scorned in the women's movement," said Olga Madar, a vice president of the United Auto Workers and a member of the policy council of the National Woman's Political Caucus.

Miss Madar was one of many women who sprang to the defense of Gloria Steinem and Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., when Mrs. Friedan singled them out as "female chauvinist boors," antimale and part of an ideological split within the feminist movement.

Miss Steinem and Mrs. Abzug were restrained in their reaction to Mrs. Friedan's magazine article and news conference Tuesday until it became clear that word of the so-called split made headlines. In increasingly stronger terms, Miss Steinem and Mrs. Abzug offered their rebuttals.

One Person Problem

"I think it is not honest of me to say there are not disagreements. There are," said Miss Steinem. "It's worse that women think there is some big philosophical split than that they understand the real problem with one person. Of course there are tactical differences but we also work together.

"But an individual who has delusions of inventing and downing the movement is bound to attack other women who raise their heads. Philosophy has nothing to do with it."

Mrs. Abzug described the article as "theoretically inaccurate and factually wrong and subjective] sensationalist literary projection."

"Many people have fantasies," she said. "But few write them down."

Mrs. Friedan, author of "The Feminine Mystique" and a founder of the National Organization for Women, criticized feminists who portray women as super virtuous and men as the enemy. She said that Miss Steinem and others had set up unrealistic goals for the proverbial housewife in Peoria and had encouraged cases of the "dropout" wife, who leaves her husband and children.

Miss Steinem and Mrs. Abzug claim Mrs. Friedan is guilty of the very things she accuses them of.

"If anyone's past actions have been female chauvinism, it's hers," said Miss Steinem, who maintains that it was Mrs. Freidan who wanted the National Woman's Political Caucus to support women regardless of the issues.

As for luring women out of their homes, Miss Steinem says, "The whole point is I would never tell another woman what to do. The whole point is personal choice, options. So for some women in a bad marriage it might be right to leave, for others it's right to stay. It's dangerous to make group judgments."

Mrs. Abzug was criticized in the article for running against Rep. William F. Ryan, a supporter of women's rights, in a primary battle, after her own congressional district was gerrymandered. She lost.

Some women interviewed said that perhaps this dissent was a healthy sign that the movement was strong enough now that women could disagree publicly, but most viewed the arguments as unfortunate.

Wilma Scott Heide, national president of NOW, stressed that no single individual or organization should be regarded as speaking for the whole movement.

She said there were some philosophical differences but not of major consequence.

"We didn't start out at the same place, it would be a miracle if we ended up at the same place," she said.

Felt Ignored

Several women, including a close associate, suggested that Mrs. Friedan, had long been feeling she had been ignored at a leadership level in favor of younger and later arrivals to the movement. Another said she had political ambitions to run for the Senate and compared her to the black candidate who says, "I like whites. I'm not a Black Panther."

Mrs. Friedan denied personal envy or ambitions had anything to do with her statements.

"The polls show that of all the women who have been spokeswomen, I'm the one woman most identified with. I'm asked to do more than I can do now."

She said she sees her role in the movement as visonary and said that twice before she had managed to step in to save it from going off onto the wrong track.

Tactical Maneuver

"The first hint of manhating with the radical lesbians in 1970 — I saw the media exploiting that and I thought up the Aug. 26 strike to emphasize other issues. The second was to get a political force, the National Woman's Political Caucus and that job is virtually done."

Now, she said, when she felt female chauvinism was threatening to cause a male backlash, she had to speak up.

"I guess I have some historical sense of pride," she said. "All the people who read my book and said it changed my life. It's not easy to change your life and I'm not going to give the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval to people I think are misleading the movement. I've said it and I think it."

Care Prevents Poisoning

Unfortunately, most kinds of food poisoning don't cause any noticeable change in a food's appearance, odor or flavor, says Mary Mennes, food administration specialist at the University of Wisconsin-Extension.

The two most common types of food poisoning bacteria are salmonella and staphylococcus. It doesn't take too much encouragement to make these bacteria grow.

With warm weather and the picnic season in full swing, there are a few do's and don't's to keep in mind when preparing food.

Clean Hands

You should always make sure you have clean hands when working with food. This may mean that you'll have to wash your hands frequently during food preparation in order to keep them clean, Mrs. Mennes warns.

Keeping all kitchen equipment such as knives, meat grinders, cutting boards and spoons clean is also important. If you happen to be one of those people who likes to taste food during the preparation process, be sure not to use the tasting spoon as a mixing spoon.

Try never to handle any foods directly if you have an infected cut on your hands. Infected cuts almost always contain staphylococcus bacteria.

Keep Pets Away

Household pets should be kept away from food preparation areas since they are frequently salmonella carriers. Pet turtles have been determined to be especially dangerous, so they shouldn't be allowed to crawl around on your kitchen counters.

Your cutting boards should be washed thoroughly after each use with hot soapy water. To sanitize them, rinse them with a dilute bleach solution.

Remember to control the temperature of all foods carefully. Bacteria grow rapidly between 60 and 120 degrees and can grow a new generation every 20 minutes. Therefore, food should be kept at temperatures of 40 degrees or below, or at 150 degrees or above to prevent bacterial growth.

Usually it's easiest to keep foods refrigerator cold rather than very hot. Freeze lunch box sandwiches the night before, for instance. They'll thaw out during the morning and still be cool at lunch time.

No Sandwiches

If a person carries a lunch to work under hot conditions which make food spoilage a problem, don't send sandwiches. Instead send cheese, canned luncheon meats, canned sausage or dry salami, Mrs. Mennes suggests.

On picnics, it's best to cook the meat just before eating it. This means transporting the meat cold and cooking it at the picnic. If the meat must be pre-cooked before the picnic, cook it thoroughly and then chill it immediately after cooking.

Be especially careful with left over foods. Left over meat or poultry should be chilled immediately after the meal and by whatever means is quickest. If you have large chunks of meat left over, separate it or slice it into thin layers on a pan in the refrigerator so it cools faster. All left overs should be cooled immediately which may mean that for a hot mixture, you set a pan of it in a sink of ice water.

Immediate Use

If you don't plan on using left overs the very next day, then freeze them rather than letting them sit around in the refrigerator.

Reheating food thoroughly won't always make it safe either. If you don't know what kind of bacteria is present, you may not be able to destroy it by simply reheating.

If you're in doubt about the safety of food, don't taste it. Just throw it out. Most picnic left overs should get this sort of treatment.

New Drug Helps TB Patients

The cost of long-term hospitalization for tuberculosis patients each year has been estimated at more than $60 per day.

Rimactane, a drug introduced only a year ago is making shorter hospital stays and out-patient treatment feasible for even far-advanced cases.

The reason, according to Francis J. Murray, MD, consultant, TB Program, Center for Disease Control, is that Rimactane, which is used in combination with another anti-TB drug, can be taken in capsule form, and does not require the injection or have the toxicity of previously employed drugs. It is therefore, "ideal" for out-patient use.

At a recent CIBA Medical Horizons scientific meeting in Kansas City, Mo. where Dr. Murray made his report, he said that with the use of the new drug-combination, tubercle bacilli are usually eliminated by the end of 12-16 weeks.

Transparent Plastic

An electric coffeemaker made of transparent plastic lets you see how much coffee is left in the pot. The transparent quality is also a bonus when cleaning: you can see when the pot is thoroughly clean before you start the next brew.

Lifestyles '72 Revealed in Hair Trends

'American Girl'

'U.S. Sophisticate'

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — The Official Hair Fashion Committee of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association recently introduced its American Hair Fashions for Fall-Winter 1972-73 at the national convention here.

The versatile collection of hairstyles is keyed to fall and winter fashions — updated versions of well-remembered classic looks.

What is the classic look? Think of all the best things you remember about the fashions you've known all your life and you have the classic look for '72.

The contemporary American woman has that combination of femme and freedom to wear Grandma's skirt lengths and father's shirts — together. Ms. America 1972 wears her brother's jeans or yards of chiffon.

The American Girl

Whatever she goes by — Miss, Mrs., or Ms. — The 'American Girl' look is one of simplicity, freedom and comfort. Elegance is no accident. She carefully engineers just the right amount into every look she wears.

NHCA has engineered all four components — simplicity freedom, comfort and elegance — into this long length style.

Remember barrettes, and the long, flowing elegance of a pageboy? Comb-held curlettes

'Contemporary Classic'

The Swinging Single

Lifestyle America 1972 is free, natural, up-to-date. Whether her habitat is campus or career, America's breed-'The Swinging Single' — looks for versatile fashion that suits her ever-changing scene.

Dual length styling makes NHCA's 'Swinging Single' one of the most versatile cuts in the fall - winter collection. Another long-hair fashion for the under-30 set, this cut features a softly layered length of curl, topped with close cropped bangs, tapered around the face and worn smooth from the crown in the small head look.

Pulled back, pinned up, or turned loose and free, this style swings with the shape born from a good professional haircut. A little more curl comes with a soft body perm with this natural look fashion ideal for the campus crowd or the young career woman.

Ms. America

'Ms. America' lives her own life in a simple, graceful style that is long, but off-the-shoulder. 'The Ms. America' takes the familiar pageboy line, but adds the enhancement of curls and waves about the face.

Remember the center part? You'll remember, too, all the tricks you can do with barrettes in all sizes, shapes and styles. Use them to pull forward a section of hair over each ear to give a fuller, bouncier style perfect for evening.

Contemporary Classic

A well-remembered look good today, especially when updated with the superstyling and professional cutting a stylist can provide. 'The Contemporary Classic' speaks softly.

There are lots of looks in this free-form fashion that range from the classic pageboy to a smoothie reminiscent of a bob. Quick service salon techniques can produce a soft wind-tossed curl. Remember the marcel wave? An electric curling iron and your stylist's know - how do the trick. Professional haircoloring could enhance natural highlights if desired.

U.S. Sophisticate

Another active American girl-on-the-go, the 'U.S. Sophisticate' dashes off to bridge club, a business meeting, a rally. When ever she goes, she'll get there with the right cut and care.

Brushed smooth and close to the head, the 'Sophisticate' is a carefree cap of a coif, right-on with short, short hairstyles coming up for fall.

A quick-change artist the 'U.S.S. Sopjhisticate,' with the extra effort of thermal curlers or the traditional salon set-and-dry, dresses up with a frong - curled fashion silhouette that is current. For a permanently curly look — the word is the answer — permanent curls, professionally engineered for the woman who will wear them.

Nine Showing Styles in Rome Not Italians

ROME (AP) — What's become of the Italians in Italian high fashions?

Couturiers showing their fall - winter collections last week in Rome included four Americans, a Russian, a German, a Turk, a Swiss and a Frenchman—nine out of the 22 who paraded their models.

It is not unusual in the world of fashions for nonnationals to try their luck in one of the capitals of haute couture. But in Italy, the foreign invasion has coincided with a decline of the Italian couturiers.

Faced by rising labor costs, the closing of small textile concerns and other repercussions of the country's generally unstable economy, their number has dwindled.

The closure over the last three years of almost 2,000 small mills, suppliers of fabrics, has forced some designers to drop out, perhaps temporarily, or to turn to ready to wear fashions.

Meanwhile, the foreigners, and Americans in particular, find a ready market in the United States where Italian fashions are taken up avidly. Models are bought up and mass produced for low price sale in little shops across the country.

Three of the non-Italian couturiers settled in Rome only a year ago. They are America's Frank Martieri, who appears to have heavy financial backing; Turkey's Bergin Usberk, and Germany's Patrizio. Germans are also enthusiastic buyers of Italian clothes.

Foreign designers apparently have less trouble in obtaining the no longer inexpensive but still highly prized Italian fabrics. Italian mills are believed to favor some of the non-Italian designers with quicker delivery. They hope sales abroad will step up broader exports of all Italian fabrics.

Quotable Women Speak Out

Here are some quotable quotes from women during the week:

"Only a female chauvinist would say that no matter how good a man's record—on peace, on women—women must support a female opponent just because she is a woman." Women's lib leader Betty Friedan.

"Once again Betty Friedan is exercising her right to be wrong. I never asked anyone to vote for me solely on the ground that I am a woman." Rep. Bella Abzug.

"We will all, male and female alike, be able to look back and perceive the female chauvinist pig of 1972 for what she really was—all bristle and pigskin on the outside, mostly bogwash on the inside." Writer Shana Alexander.

". . . Being the wife of an elected official was a diminishing position. You get a tremendous amount of acclaim and accolade without doing much of anything yourself." Mary Scranton, wife of former Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton.

"I smile but I don't answer. You are not a private individual once your family is in politics." Carolyn Barrow, wife of Prime Minister Errol Barrow of Barbados, on how to answer a tough question.

"Women should have equal rights, but I think there's a place for them... Some things I think men should do. Women...should not lose our place as women." Mary Hedrick, sheriff of Tucker County, W. Va.

Symphony League Lists Plans

BY CAROL DIEHL
Post-Crescent Correspondent

Symphony was the keyword throughout the annual board meeting of the Fox Valley Symphony League last week at the home of Mrs. Anthony Cusatis. Plans for the 1972-73 symphony season keyed the meeting conducted by Mrs. Robert Strauss, route 1, Menasha, president of the women's organization.

The opening concert of the Fox Valley Symphony has been set for Oct. 22 at the Neil Armstrong Theater, Neenah. This concert will be the first public performance at the theater which has a seating capacity of 1,600. After the evening's performance, the League will sponsor a reception adjacent to the theater entrance.

Kick-off Breakfast

Symphony has been scheduled for Oct. 2 through 7 in the Valley with a kick-off breakfast of the board planned Sept. 27. Mrs. William Heckrodt, route 1, Menasha, will head the annual event along with the sale of season tickets. Headquarters will again be at Heids.

Highlight of the women's activities is the Mardi Gras planned for Feb. 24 at Riverview Country Club. The event will be a masked affair with Mrs. Robert Ducklow and Mrs. Robert Roloff, Kaukauna, as co-chairmen.

Other committee members for the Mardi Gras are Mrs. Arnold Evans and Mrs. Russell Diehl, Manawa, publicity; Mrs. F. James Grist, invitations; Mrs. Perry Brown, Mrs. Fred C. Heinritz, Mrs. Harold Ornstein, Mrs. William Strasburger, addressing; Mrs. Carl Schroeder, reservations; Mrs. Robert Sigman, finance; Mrs. E. Howard Grupe, dinner; Mrs. E.R. Shannon, resource; Mrs. William Spears, Mrs. Harold Adams, Mrs. Cusatis, Mrs. Gavin Young, Menasha, and Mrs. Carl Peeters, Little Chute, talent.

Mrs. Gordon Gill, Neenah, will head special events; Mrs. Warren Wilson, Neenah, favors, and decorations will be directed by Mrs. Charles Buchanan, Mrs. Henry Bailey, Mrs. Stu McIntyre, Mrs. Jack Butler, Mrs. William Hammill, Mrs. Miles Mercer, Mrs. Fred Graves, Mrs. O. C. Boldt, Mrs. Michael Lattimer, and Kaukauna residents, Mrs. Robert Lang and Mrs. Raymond Breitbach. Mrs. Strauss and Mrs. Darwin Smith of Menasha, will head the clean-up committee.

Mrs. Strauss informed the board that there will be four concerts this season with the League sponsoring three receptions after the concerts. The group will continue its monthly board meetings and will sponsor three pre-program teas and one luncheon for the coming season.

On Sept. 17 a picnic has been planned at Riverside Park in Neenah for members of the orchestra, the League and the association. Conductor Istvan Jaray will attend.

Season's Plans

The Wisconsin Symphony Orchestra Association will hold a convention at the University of Wisconsin-Fox Valley Campus on Nov. 10 and 11. League members will assist the orchestra personnel during registration and open their homes to visiting musicians who are associated with 17 symphonies throughout the state.

Plans for the coming season also include free concerts for children and young people; string and wind ensemble programs in area schools; youth soloist competition for outstanding high school musicians; dress rehearsal open to "special audience" groups including music students, elderly, handicapped, special education classes, mental patients; financial support for the Fox Valley Youth Symphony, and continuing opportunities for outstanding musicians to play with adult professionals and amateur musicians in the Fox Valley Symphony.

Plans for the season are a cooperative effort of the Fox Valley Symphony Assoc., the Fox Valley Sumphony League and the Fox Valley Symphony.

14th State Convention Calls Square Dancers

This year La Crosse will be welcoming some 2,400 square dancers to the 14th Wisconsin Square Dance Convention with its theme "La Crosse for You in '72."

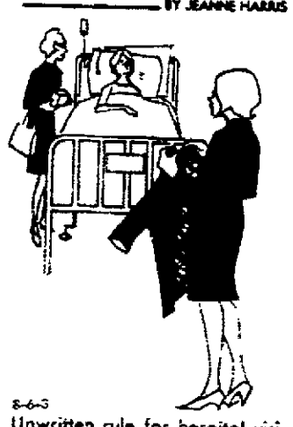

The convention will be held at the Whitney Center of the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse on Aug. 11, 12, 13. A Trail End Dance will be held on Aug. 10 at Whitney Center for early arrivers in anticipation of a fun-filled weekend.

A wide variety of activities are planned. There will be a fun level, advanced level and open square dancing; round dancing, workshops, exhibition dancing and panel discussions. A noon luncheon and style show are scheduled for Saturday at the YM-YWCA.

Convention work has been divided into 18 areas with a chairman responsible for each phase. In charge of the panel discussions this year are Bruce and Bonnie Busch, 2522 Barbara Ave., Appleton. Bruce is the caller for the Fast-Eighters and the Teen Twisters square dance clubs. Serving as executive secretary to the board of directors are Lyle and Margaret Leatherman, 715 Seventh St., Menasha. They are caller and instructor for four area clubs; Grand Squares, Romeos 'n Calicos, Belles and Beaux, and Village Squares.

Further information concerning registration and housing may be obtained from Mr. and Mrs. James Albitz, 202 N. Oak, Onalaska, Wis. 54650.

Chair's Holes Shrunk

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

Q: Apparently the wood in a fairly old cottage chair has now dried out so much the holes in the legs have shrunk. At least, enough so that the rungs are noticeably loose, in spite of that old-time glue. I can't remove them to scrape out the old glue and replace with new. Is there any simple treatment with the rungs still in place? — Worcester.

A: Try wedging. Wiggle in thin toothpicks as far as you can, then snap them off. Also support the rung holes so you can put a drop or two of epoxy adhesive and hope it can drip at least a little way down between rung and hole. This will take time, but a solid chair is worth it.

Q: Believing that all the small roots can't do the mortar between the bricks much good, I pulled a heavy growth of ivy off one side of my brick house. The main part came off with trouble, but there seem to be millions of tiny root ends embedded in the mortar. I tried weed killer. This turned them brown but did not make them fall out. A wire brush was very hard work with very little to show for it. Can you suggest something else to try? The house looks like a three-day growth of dark beard. — Chicago.

A: A couple of years ago, a reader wrote in her solution of the same problem: Her husband used his small Bernz-O-Matic torch, which frizzled the roots. Then they wire-brushed away quite easily.

Your Problems

A Tribute to Hubby From a Happy Wife

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I loved your definition of "a real man" — and I was glad to hear you say you are married to one. I am, too, and I'd like to tell you what I like best about my husband.

It's the way he gets down on the floor and plays with the kids, his big hands cradling their little heads as he helps them do somersaults. Or when he stays with the children for an evening so I can go someplace. And when I come home I see the clumsy but tender way he has put on the baby's diaper and his little undershirt, backwards.

I adore it when he comes into the kitchen and follows me around and talks to me while I'm putting the final touches on supper — telling me about his day, yakking a mile a minute and sharing a part of his life that I don't see.

I love the way he comes with me to PTA meetings even though there are only three or four other daddies there.

I appreciate his kindness to my parents. He is generous, thoughtful and sweet to them.

Above all, Ann, he makes me feel like a real woman. And I guess that's what makes him a real man. — Big Jim's Wife

Dear Wife: It's a joy to receive a letter like yours in the midst of the thousands of gripes from women who are full of complaints — many justified, I'm sure. Thanks for the day-brightener. Jim sounds like a gem. And so do you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If I'm a nut on the subject, so be it, but I get wild when I read such stories in the newspapers as these (they all appeared within the past month):

"Two-year-old falls off a balcony while watching a basketball game."

Year-old tot tumbles out of grocery cart and is seriously injured."

"Four-year-old drowns in bathtub."

"Toddler in serious condition after drinking cleaning fluid."

"Youngster found at bottom of pool. Two lifeguards on duty. No one saw that the child was in trouble."

"Tot suffocates in car while parents shopped for three hours."

"Five-year-old dies after

eating 40 pills found in grandmother's purse."

"Child of 18 months killed on road in front of aunt's home."

In every single instance, somebody was not doing his job. I know the heartache and agony that such accidents can cause parents, grandparents or whoever was supposed to be in charge — but it doesn't change things. Nothing is so important as keeping an eye on children.

What's a baby doing in a grocery cart, or at a basketball game, or out playing on the road? What are cleaning fluid and pills doing where a child can get his hands on them? Why is a youngster left in a locked car or in a bathtub?

Please, Ann, print this letter and let's hope and pray that every parent who reads it will ask himself, "Could any of these tragedies have occurred in my family this past year?" — Midwest Plea

Dear Midwest: Here is your letter, and my thanks for writing it. It's full of common sense and good questions — and if it shakes up a few million mothers, I'm for that, too.

Are you, or someone you care about, messing around with drugs — or considering it? Are all drugs bad? What about pot — in moderation? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs," separates the facts from the fiction. For each booklet ordered send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (16 cents postage) to Ann Landers, Box 3345, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

THE WORD IS OPTIMUM

Men love to look at flabby women.

Men blind with love.

But most men would enjoy looking at women a whole lot more, if there were a little less of them to see.

Not with torturous crash diets or faddy fads, but with honest-to-goodness, proven figure control methods that really work. And it could cost you as little as just 50 cents a day.

Aspirin as Effective As Fancy Cold Drugs

BY ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — A survey of medical data done for the Food and Drug Administration concludes that, in general, aspirin is probably just as effective as combination products sold for the relief of common colds.

The study was done by several medical panels of the National Academy of Sciences — National Research Council at the request of the federal agency. It included 27 products sold without a prescription.

The only products rated fully effective in fulfilling claims for the relief of nasal congestion are Isophrin Nose Drop Solution and Chlorephrine Nyscaps. The report had reservations, however, about the latter's claim to relieve symptoms of colds.

Judged ineffective is relieving cold symptoms are Bristamin-APC Tablets, Vicks Tri-Span 12-Hour Decongestant Tablets and Theoporin AC Tablets. The report added, however, that Bristamin was effective in relieving toothaches and menstrual pain.

All other products were considered either possibly effective or probably effective because conclusive medical proof had not been provided.

In the category of "probably effective" for the relief of nasal congestion are Privine Hydrochloride Nasal Jelly, Nasal Solution and Nasal Spray. Also in the group are:

Benedrex Inhaler, Antistine-Privine Nasal Solution, Forthane Inhaler, Wyamine Inhaler, Wyamine Sulfate Nasal Solution, Clopane Hydrochloride Solution and Vasoxyl Nasal Solution.

The report was especially critical of antihistamines. It concluded that products that are either partly or wholly antihistamines provide "no alleviation of symptoms or shortening of the duration of symptoms of colds" although they may be effective in attacking symptoms of hay fever.

Their only effective ingredient, said the report, is aspirin. The report implied that plain aspirin might be just as effective — it is also less expensive — but should be avoided by anyone allergic to it.

Products in this category are: Coricidin Cold Tablets, Histadyl and A.S.A. Compound Fulvules, Decapryn, Inhiston-APC Tablets, Ampar Timed-Release Capsules and Benadrin Solution. The report warned that the method of applying the last-named drug externally may result in immunity to it.

Two non-histamine drugs were considered only "possibly effective" in relieving symptoms of colds and "probably effective" in dealing with hay fever. They are Contac Capsules and Vicks Tri-Span 12-Hour Decongestant Tablets.

Judged "possibly effective" in relieving symptoms of both hay fever and common colds are Tuamine Inhaler, Tagathen Tablets, Nasalaire Inhaler and Quadrin Tablets.

Only one of four drugs making claims of long-lasting properties was able to fulfill claims for extended effectiveness, said the report. The exception is Chlorephrine Nyscaps.

The other three are Contac Capsules, Vicks Tri-Span 12-Hour Decongestant Tablets and Ampar Timed-Release Capsules.

Two of the products were singled out because they could cause adverse reactions if used to excess. They are Isophrin Nose Drop Solution and Nasalaire Inhaler. Copies of the report may be obtained from the FDA Drug Efficacy Study Office (BD-60), 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20852.

Here's How to Play Success Chess in Job

BY SYLVIA PORTER

Is your immediate corporate boss — the person directly superior to you — a "shelf-sitter" likely to stay right where he or she is rather than to move up or be replaced?

If so, you're probably wasting precious career time, for your move up the corporate ladder could be blocked indefinitely by this immobile superior.

Are you traveling the right kind of route to the top — if that's where you want to go in your company? If, for instance, men in marketing or finance usually inherit the presidency in your corporation, are you in marketing or finance?

Or are you in corporate specialties from which men are rarely promoted to the top in your field? Think very hard about where you are on the management ladder and aim for increased exposure and visibility.

Have you kept your options wide open and your opportunities flexible so you can alter your corporate behavior for your own good, if so indicated?

Move Quickly

Or are you being stereotyped in your company? If this is so, make a move quickly either within or outside the company to break the stereotype.

Do you, in short, know how to play "success chess"?

The middle-management employment market is again in a healthy expansion, reflecting the quickening economic upturn in the U.S. in the second half of 1972.

As a result, large numbers of you are moving into new jobs as middle executives in aggressive, fast-growing concerns. And large numbers of you are moving with the promise of rapid promotion into the upper corporate ranks as part of your deal — as long as top management believes you deserve a promotion because of your superior performance in your starting position.

Porter

Basic Moves

But you might be stymied by such circumetances as I described above. To help you, here are basic moves in the game of success chess as drawn up by a top authority in the field of executive behavior, Eugene Emerson Jennings, professor at Michigan State University.

Avoid loss of career time by getting away from an immobile superior and by becoming a crucial subordinate to a mobile superior. When your boss moves, you'll move, since you are as important to your superior as he or she is to you.

Make sure you are traveling the right route to the top, if that is your goal. The top four rungs of the corporate ladder from which executives are being promoted today are: Operations-division management, finance, marketing and administration. The least likely specialties for promotions are: Public relations, manufacturing, international, research and development.

"Self-Nomination"

—Keep your options wide open and practice "self-nomination" for the top jobs. Do this by letting those who do the nominating for key posts know that you want a bigger job or at least want to learn how to qualify for that bigger job.

—If, after long and serious deliberation, you decide to quit, rehearse the move ahead of time. Don't be counted among the executives who have fired their corporation in the afternoon and rehired it the next day. Instead, write out your resignation, put it in a safe place in your desk, lock the desk and let at least a week go by before you take it out. Then if you really mean it, rewrite it and submit it.

—Make sure that when you leave your company, you do so on your own terms and that you always leave on the best of terms. And have faith that, if you can succeed in one job, you can succeed in another, even without having climbed a single rung on a corporate ladder. The corporation is a market — not merely a place in which simply to work for a living — and the market is for skills. Your skills are best determined by your basic performance.

—And heed these additional clues on promotions offered by other experts on executive advancement: The great majority of promotions to top spots are made from within the firm, but significant numbers of these were employed by their companies for only a relatively few years; the average age of newly promoted company presidents and chief officers is now 46 and falling steadily; virtually all newly promoted company executives are college graduates and more than one in three holds advanced degrees.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	All pass

Opening lead: Queen of clubs.

North was too strong for an opening bid of one no trump and bid one diamond instead. His raise to two no trump simply asked South. "If you're rock-bottom minimum, let's stop here. If not, please go on to game." Since South's hand had ample values for his bid of one no trump he was delighted to go on to game.

West led the club queen from his strong sequence. An excellent lead since if East had held either top honor West's spade ace may well have provided the needed entry to beat the hand.

Declarer won in dummy and played a heart to his king and then took a successful heart finesse. He smiled at the Inspector and then played spades in hopes of overtricks. West won the spade ace and knocked out the club and declarer took one spade, three hearts, three diamonds and two clubs and made his contract. He awaited the Inspector's compliments in great anticipation.

What he got was the following: "You played that hand in a fog. If the heart finesse had lost, you would not have taken nine tricks even if diamonds had split or had the spade ace been onside. You took the worst line imaginable but luckily, we made game."

How should South have played in order to secure compliments from the I.G.? After winning the club in dummy, his first play should be a spade to his king. If this had won, all declarer would then need was four diamonds for his contract. If diamonds failed to break, he could then repeat the spade play for his ninth trick.

In actual play West would win the first spade to drive out the last club stopper. Declarer would then test diamonds in search of nine top tricks. When diamonds failed, he would then be forced to take the winning heart finesse.

Which was the Inspector's main point. "It is all right to take a finesse to make a contract. But the least one can do is to first investigate other good opportunities."

Isolation Affects Behavior of Humans, Animals

Prolonged physical isolation of individuals is known to produce drastic changes in behavior, such as increased aggressiveness and abnormal sexual behavior. According to a report from Purdue University's Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology, this is true of both human and animal.

Moreover, it has been shown that exposure of animals to either isolation or an "enriched environment" not only affects the individual's ability to learn, but actually alters the size of the animal's brain.

Old Houses Made Into Apartments Pose Problems for Fire Inspectors

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Nobody really knows how many older houses in Appleton — primarily those converted to two-or multi-family — are violating housing fire codes. But there might be quite a few.

Apparently the state and city codes are sufficient, even to force reasonable safety compliance for those who might think they escape under some "grandfather clause" condition.

Richard Atkins, city building and heating inspector, said many one-and two-family houses were built or converted prior to the passage of Appleton's housing code in 1965 but that the inspection department has the right to declare a unit "uninhabitable" for a serious fire hazard, among other things.

Problem Is Finding Them

"The amount of problems in these houses are relatively few but there are some bad ones, and when we find them, we'll take care of them," he said. The difficulty is finding them.

The buildings originally constructed as multi-unit apartments (three or more units) aren't the problem. These have been under state code for years, including the modern state building code adopted in 1926, according to Willard Van Handel, the state building inspector for Outagamie County.

The problems are the former single family units which were converted to two-or more family units years ago. These weren't built to serve that many units and often lack adequate facilities. And one-and two-family units are under city — not state — jurisdiction.

Many were converted without building permits or before permits were required, and the city isn't aware of their conditions. The inspections department has only one full-time field inspector, and generally has to rely on complaints by tenants.

"I think probably the biggest difficulty is knowing where the hazard exists," Atkins said. "Some owners won't let us in the house."

Fire Chief Roland Kuehnl said that when a tenant reports a hazard, and the owner "is obstinate, and won't let us go through, we tell the people to move." Admittedly, that doesn't solve the problem, he said.

"Growing Pains"

The Fox Cities has been experiencing the problem of large-scale inadequate housing only in recent years, as it burgeons into a metropolitan area. This probably is why Appleton and other area communities have only in recent years adopted housing codes, Atkins said.

Other metropolitan areas already have gone through these "growing pains," he added. And the nonmetropolitan areas undoubtedly have seriously hazardous housing, but the scale is still small.

The question of hazardous housing usually arises after a fatal fire, such as the one that last week killed an Appleton man. Kuehnl said the state fire marshal's report on the fire still isn't in but the local fire department investigation indicated that no housing deficiency was responsible for the late-night blaze.

The death last week was the first building fire death in Appleton since the mid-1960s.

Atkins said the inspection

Waupaca County Accident Fatal to 5-Year-Old Girl

A 5-year-old Sugar Bush girl became Waupaca Conuty's 11th traffic fatality of July, and the 15th for the year, when she was struck by a car in the village of Sugar Bush about 1:25 p.m. Sunday

Rhonda R. Raddatz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Raddatz, route 2, New London, was pronounced dead on arrival at Clintonville Community Hospital.

According to Waupaca County Sheriff's authorities, the Raddatz girl ran in front of a car driven by George L. Fields, 65, route 3, New London, as Fields was traveling east on County Trunk WW about a quarter mile west of the U.S. 45 intersection.

The victim was transported to the hospital by the Clintonville volunteer rescue squad.

A 21-year-old Shawano man, Kenneth J. Kitzinger, was killed early Sunday morning when he was struck by an auto as he and a companion walked across County Trunk H five miles northeast of Shawano.

Kitzinger and David J. Daniel, 18, route 1, Shawano, were struck at 12:52 a.m. by a southbound car driven by John P. Mann Jr., 21, route 1, Shawano.

Daniel sustained a broken leg and head injuries. He was taken to Shawano Community Hospital and transferred to St. Vincent Hospital in Green Bay. Kitzinger was pronounced dead on arrival at Shawano Community. Mann was not injured.

Further details of the accident were not available. Shawano county officials are investigating.

Deaths of 10 other victims in weekend accidents raised Wisconsin's 1972 highway fatality toll to 595 today, compared with 540 on the same date last year.

Joseph Kobylinski, 52, and Edward Dornbrook, 35, of Milwaukee were killed Sunday night when they were struck by a car on a South Side street.

David L. Newfeld, 12, of Pine Grove, Ill., was killed Sunday when his motorcycle hit a roadside tree south of Lake Tomahawk, Oneida County.

Mrs. Edward O'Brien, 62, of Black River Falls died Sunday when the panel truck in which she was riding struck an Interstate 94 shoulder in Jackson County and overturned.

Howard E. Butler Jr., 26, of Doylestown died Sunday when the car in which he was riding crashed on a Columbia County road.

Larry Brinkman, 24, of Brownsville was killed Sunday when his car overturned on Wisconsin 175 south of Fond du Lac.

A Stoddard girl, Rita Lenzer, 16, was killed Saturday night when the car she was in collided with another car on Wisconsin 35 in Vernon County.

Michael Lynch, 39, of Minneapolis died Saturday when his motorcycle crashed on Wisconsin 63 north of Drummond, Bayfield County.

William Wachtel, 24, of rural Galena, Ill., was killed Saturday when his car ran off a Lafayette County road east of Shullsburg.

Deborah Dopkins, 2, was fatally injured Saturday when the parked car in which she was playing coasted down a driveway and struck a utility pole in front of her Janesville home.

Embarrass Proud of Its Funny Name

EMBARRASS (AP) — Residents of Embarrass say they aren't embarrassed about discussing how their East Central Wisconsin community got its name. But some try to avoid talking about it because they say it's just too complicated.

Postal clerk Ruby Rindt said the late Rev. Nicholas Diedrich of Clintonville determined the name came from the French word "embarrasser," meaning "to impede, obstruct and entangle."

Some loggers called a stream passing through the community the Tangled River because pine logs floated down it to sawmills were obstructed in this area, the Catholic priest said. The French Canadians dubbed it the Riviere Embarrasse.

The townspeople eventually adopted the French version as the name of their village and the river.

"When people ask where we're from, usually we say Clintonville," Mrs. Rindt said. "It saves a lot of explanation."

Wolf River Patrol Works for Boater Safety

BY MARK HANSMANN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEW LONDON — It was a slow day on the Wolf River for John Prinsen. As he guided his patrol boat toward Fremont, it was evident that the overcast sky was keeping river traffic to a minimum. On nicer days, he is kept quite busy.

Prinsen, route 3, New London, is one of two patrolmen hired by Waupaca County to patrol about 30 miles of the Wolf between New London and Fremont daily from April 1 to Sept. 30. They provide assistance to boaters in trouble, promote water safety and enforce regulations. He and Jerome Jorgenson, Fremont, work in cooperation with the state Department of Natural Resources.

The boat Prinsen uses was purchased and equipped by the Wolf River Preservation Association, a two-year-old organization comprised of representatives from the villages, cities and towns along the Wolf.

Help for Boaters

"We're out here to protect people, help them, and show them things they are doing that abuse the river," said Prinsen. The patrolmen have authority to issue citations, but often they let boaters off with a strong warning.

When Prinsen leaves on his patrol, he has no idea what situations he may encounter during the day. If river traffic is heavy, he may receive many calls to assist boaters in trouble, stop numerous boats to check for registrations and life preservers, pull debris from the water and issue citations for speeding where limits are posted.

The day this reporter made the trip, Prinsen's first call was to tow a boat with a malfuncioning motor to a New London marina. Prinsen often stops at marinas along the river to obtain information on where help may be needed. He also has a police radio on the boat to monitor calls for help and to call for assistance.

Friendly Attitude

"Courtesy pays in this job," Prinsen said. He waves a friendly hello to everyone he passes, and often stops and talks to fishermen and property owners along the river. Many of them have small gripes or problems they want to make known.

Watching the buoys that mark the deepest channels along the river, Prinsen found one that had drifted out of place and another that had been tipped over, probably from a large wake. As he righted it, he said, "For the minute it takes, you might be saving someone's life."

Prinsen, who is on 24-hour call, has received a few distress calls at night. "I do not like night traveling on this river," he said, "and I don't know why or how people do it — it just isn't safe. Nobody actually knows this river, because from one day to the next, a log or barrel could turn up anywhere."

Skiing Opposed

He also is opposed to water skiing on the Wolf. Skiers are required to remain "a safe distance" from other boaters and swimmers, but the river is not wide enough for that, Prinsen said. "There are a lot of people who just don't see the danger." He said there were a couple "close calls" near New London recently.

At Fremont, he pointed out the problems that the village is having with its river use ordinance. Village officials passed an ordinance establishing a six-mile per hour speed limit on the river there for a one-year trial basis, to eliminate shore erosion caused by the wakes left by boats.

Many boaters are not obeying the speed limit, and Prinsen said a large number of the citations he writes are for that reason. He often tries to calm irate boaters by telling them "We don't make the ordinances, we're just out here to enforce them."

Despite the speed limit, boats pulling water skiers are permitted to travel 40 miles per hour in the same area. Prinsen said that doesn't make sense, and said he has a hard time explaining it to complaining boaters.

Littering a Problem

After turning back toward New London, Prinsen told of more problems he encounters. "We're tough on litterers," he said, "but they're hard to catch." The ones who are caught get citations automatically without warnings.

Boats are supposed to stay on one side of the river, as cars. But, Prinsen said, "many people don't know that, and it can be dangerous going around a bend.

"There are people who don't like these patrol boats," Prinsen said. "They don't like the restrictions." But he said he has had a lot of fun on the river nearly all his life, and other people should continue to be able to use it. "Boat traffic is getting thicker every year, so you have to have some restrictions.

Aid for Boaters

"We're not out here primarily to issue citations," Prinsen said, adding the job is to aid boaters, and educate them to make the Wolf a safer place in the future.

"Most people I meet on the river are very nice and polite," he said. "But if they give me a rough time, then out comes the citation book.

"A lot of people have the idea these patrol boats are just out on pleasure rides," said Prinsen. "But as soon as a boat breaks down or has trouble, then they would love to see us."

Evening Lions Start Eye Substation

BY GEORGE WYETH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The biggest roars in Appleton Lionism over the past year have been heard from the Noon Club, celebrating its 50th anniversary, but there is a "cub" lurking in the den as well.

The cub is the Appleton Evening Lions, an offshoot of the original club. It is younger (founded in 1964) and smaller than the Noon Club, but has many of the same goals and activities.

The Evening Lions played a part in setting up and helping to run the Lions' state convention here in May. Secretary Jacob Shilcrat, in particular, helped with tickets and reservations.

Like the Noon Club, the Evening Lions center their work on efforts to help the blind, in tune with the policy of the international organization.

Their biggest project in the Appleton area has been starting and helping to keep up a Fox Valley substation of the eye bank in Milwaukee. Only recently through this service the eyes of a boy killed in an accident in Neenah were sent to Milwaukee to be transplanted into two waiting patients.

The club also helps support the state organization's camp for the blind at Rosholt. Besides contributing financially, the members take an annual tour of the camp.

Money for the club's projects comes from the members themselves and from the light bulb sale each fall and fruit cake sales.

Lionism is not all work. The club takes part in a number of special activities during the year besides its weekly meetings and programs. The Lions are sports minded. In the past year, they have taken visits to Appleton Foxes games, held a "Golf Jamboree" and taken part in a state bowling tournament.

The biggest recent activity for incoming club President Don Mattison was a trip to the Lions International convention in Mexico City in June. He was one of 45,000 delegates from 148 countries and part of a Wisconsin contingent of 170 delegates and wives. The convention was addressed by the president of Mexico and opened with a parade of flags that Mattison remembers as being "truly impressive."

The Evening Lions recently had a change of officers. The newly elected leaders are Mattison, president; Del Boetcher, first vice president; Tom Van Wyk, second vice president; Lee Atkinson, third vice president; Shilcrat, secretary; and John Newbury, treasurer.

Better Trash Cans Needed, Panel Says

Sutherland Receives Report on College, Wisconsin Containers

College Avenue and other Appleton locations need better waste containers, a special committee has advised Mayor James Sutherland.

The committee is awaiting information from Northside Businessmen's Association and other cities before submitting a recommendation on an offer by a private firm to donate free-standing containers to the city.

Special Services, Inc., of Lebanon, Mo., would provide the containers and sell advertising on them to local merchants. The city would own the containers after two years.

The mayor has sent the committee a ruling it requested from City Atty. David Geenen, in which he gave the opinion that the advertising would be a "minor encroachment" on public right-of-way if the containers are placed on sidewalks, and would therefore be permissible under the law.

The committee agreed that the present containers, attached to street light poles along the avenue, are too small and should be replaced by free-standing units such as those offered by the firm, unless they could supplement the larger units in some areas.

The committee recommended placing free-standing containers on both sides of College from Richmond to Drew Street and on both sides of Wisconsin Avenue from Meade to Richmond.

Colors would be chosen later, based on reaction from merchants and city officials. The committee also recommended being given authority to review all advertising to be placed on the containers.

The committee advised having the city attorney review the contract that would go with the containers.

Besides asking north side merchants for additional information, the committee intends to contact officials in cities currently under contract with the Missouri firm.

Ellis Urges Revamp Of Neenah Council

NEENAH — A major revamping of the city council committee structure, aimed at getting elected people into all decision-making roles will be introduced at the Aug. 2 council session.

Ald. Michael G. Ellis, who proposed the committee restructuring several months ago, said today that he will introduce his plan at the next council session in hopes of having it implemented by Sept. 1.

Ellis, who has been critical of the present committee system because of its inability to "cope with the problems of the 70's and 80's" is calling for consolidation and a revamp which would put lected people on all policy-setting committees, boards and commissions.

His five-point plan includes:

—Creation of new standing committees made up of elected representatives.

—Consolidation of other committees.

—Elimination of certain boards and commisiioners.

—Forming of sub-committees to handle specific problems.

—State legislation so the changes can be made.

Instead of the present five council committees including finance, health and welfare, public protection, street and sanitation plus the public works which is made up of the chairman of each of the other four, Ellis has suggested creating five new committees, which he says "would be able to handle the complex problems of today."

The new committees he proposes are:

Finance, which would handle all money matters relative to the city, including scrutinization of the executive budget.

—Health and social services, which would be a consolidation of the public protection and health and welfare committees. He also suggests that this committee would create a "closer policy-making line of communication between the park and recreation, police and fire and cemetery commissions and library board.

—Streets and public works to handle the present public works and street and sanitation duties, which Ellis says now overlap.

—Planning and capital improvement, which would take over the functions of the plan commission and deal with other areas like zoning, annexation plans and long-range program.

—Cooperative legislative review committee to be made up of elected representatives from Neenah, Menasha and Winnebago County. Calling this the "most important of the new committees," Ellis said, "the city can no longer afford to be oblivious to the actions of other entities."

Referring to a "heavy concentration of non-elected people on significant committees" Ellis proposes to get more council participation on such groups as the plan commission, sewage commission, housing authority, park and recreation commission and capital improvements committee.

"I am not recommending the abolition of these commissions and boards, but I feel it would be desirable for these commissions and boards to be more closely linked and to be held responsible to the elected representatives," Ellis said in a written report to the city council.

According to his timetable, Ellis said today that he will bring up the plan at the Aug. 2 council session to be referred for review with a directive that a recommendation be "That will give the mayor 10 days to two weeks to review the new structure and make his appointments before Sept. 1," he said.

THE WORD IS OPTIMUM

'Political Woman' Hits Women's Lib

BY FRANK CHURCH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Proponents of women's liberation could probably make some hay out of Valeria Sitter, one of only four women in the state who serves in two elective government posts and is going for a third.

But Valeria Sitter, a conservative and a traditionalist, would not let them.

"I think this (women's liberation) is revolting," she said. "I don't think there is anything to liberate us from."

That doesn't sound normal, coming from a woman who ran for the Oshkosh common council three times before finding success in 1969, and is now in her second term on both the city council and the Winnebago County board of supervisors.

She is also the American Party's candidate for Congress in the Sixth Congressional District.

"I don't want to be a man, I want to be a woman," said the 55-year-old widow, who said she probably wouldn't be running for office if her husband hadn't died 10 years ago, leaving her alone and with a lot of time to do things.

"Equal praise for equal work" is all that Mrs. Sitter asks as a woman, she said.

Mrs. Sitter is one of three candidates running for the Congress in the Sixth District this year. The other two are incumbent Republican Rep. William A. Steiger who, like Mrs. Sitter, is from Oshkosh, and Democratic party challenger James Adams, the mayor of Menasha.

Mrs. Sitter's views on women's liberation coincide with her conservative opinions on other matters of government:

—She is against big government and wants to see local communities, businesses and people confronted with fewer regulations and programs from Washington.

For example, Mrs. Sitter believes President Nixon's proposed Family Assistance Plan, which would substitute a guaranteed annual income and work incentives for the present federal welfare program, is "nothing more than socialism. It's straight out of Karl Marx (founder of communism)."

She believes a guaranteed annual income is wrong, and that poverty and related problems could be solved more easily by a "free exchange between business and individuals" than by government welfare programs.

All federal social-oriented programs need a "complete overhaul," she said.

—There is "no difference between the other two parties in this country," she believes. Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and now Nixon, she thinks, have all emphasized 'this social welfare thing" in domestic programs, and brought about tremendous increases in national federal spending, which she abhors.

"On and on, we've had increases in spending," she said. "It hasn't changed at all since Johnson was in there."

—Government's principal functions are "to keep the peace, keep law and order and to see that we are not attacked by any foreign powers," she says, citing the framework laid down by the country's founding fathers.

Government should not, she said, "interfere in every other facet of our lives."

—She joined the Democratic party back in 1968, but left after one year. Although always a conservative (and local Democratic party politics in Winnebago County has been anything but conservative in recent years), Mrs. Sitter said she did favor the principles laid down by Thomas Jefferson, the party's founder, which favors less big government and more individual responsibility.

—The big issue in the campaign, Mrs. Sitter believes, is the Occupational Health and Safety Act of 1970, which Steiger co-sponsored in Congress.

The act has come under attack nation-wide in recent weeks, and Mrs. Sitter said local businessmen have told her of their displeasure with the act.

"They (Department of Labor) send these inspectors around," she said, "and they can find all these infractions of rules that don't even exist, literally."

She said the act — "is another example of big government," and said it was not needed because business and industry themselves were taking steps to promote safety in their plants.

"I think probably the ones that aren't (taking steps, voluntarily) are the exception, rather than the rule," she said.

She said any regulations on safety and health should be left to local communities and the states.

Gilbert Paper Workers Okay 2-Year Pact

MENASHA — Members of Local 477, United Papermakers and Paperworkers, AFL-CIO, Sunday ratified a new two-year contract with the Gilbert Paper Co., which calls for a 5.5 per wage increase plus improvements in the fringe benefit package.

The old contract between Gilbert and the 300-member Local 477 had expired on June 30, but both sides had agreed to extend it for 30 days while negotiations continued.

Spokesmen for the company and union said the new contract, which also calls for increases in July 1973, was within the Federal Phase II price-wage increase guidelines.

Besides the wage increases, improvements in the fringe package included insurance, vacations and shift differential, according to the union spokesman.

Members of Local 477 met Sunday at Sabre Lanes to vote on the new contract. Approval came with a standing vote.

Wage increases are retroactive to July 3, with the terms of the second year going into force in mid-1973.

Police Physicals Pose Problem in Menasha

MENASHA — City Health Nurse Catherine Feit must enforce the city's new ordinance requiring physical examinations for policemen and firemen, but she does not know how stiff to make it or what to tell those officers who don't pass.

Therefore, she has requested a meeting of the city's public protection committee. It will be held at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday.

At that same meeting, the committee will also take up the tavern license application from the wife of a man who has been turned down several times in the past for a license at 1 Tayco Street.

"No comment," said committee Chairman Herbert Batley, when asked if he felt that Mrs. Maynard Schwab would meet the same fate in her request for a license as her husband has. He said it will have to be discussed by the committee.

The ordinance requiring physical exams for protective personnel will mean between 40-50 policemen and firemen will have to be checked this year, the first year of enforcement for the ordinance.

Mrs. Feit wants to know what should be on the examination, and how it should be enforced.

Sanctioned weight chart, if be a weight requirement, and what should be done with officers who don't meet the requirement?

Batley said that an FBI-used in the test, would not be passed by all the members of both departments. "It might prove difficult for some of the officers, no question about it," he admitted.

The question officials must face, he said, is: how tough should the city get with its exam? The ordinance requiring the exam was passed with the intent of making sure that protective personnel are in good physical condition, in light of the tough physical demands of their jobs.

The ordinance requires the physical examinations be taken every two years, for officers 30 years old and more, and every year, for those 45 and above.

UW Expands Services For Adult Education

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Farmers, laborers and businessmen will be rubbing elbows and swapping stories while attending special short courses at the University of Wisconsin-Madison campus in coming years.

They will be houses in a converted dormitory here that is being developed into a special Adult Education Center that will serve as living and classroom space for workers, farmers and business executives brought back to the campus for special training programs.

Gov. Patrick J. Lucey has named three prominent leaders from the fields to serve as his representatives on a council created by the 1971 Legislature to oversee the new center. Lucey's representatives will join with two UW System officials and two lawmakers in serving on the administrative council of the Adult Education Center.

Appointed by Lucey were farm representative Gilbert Rohde of Chippewa Falls, head of the state Farmers Union; W. Harold Hastings, president of the Findorff Construction Company of Madison, business representative; and John Schmitt, president of the Wisconsin AFL-CIO.

UW Officials

UW System President John C. Weaver has appointed campus Business School Associate Dean James Blakely and Harold Montross, a UW Extension official.

Lawmakers serving on the council are State Sen. Walter G. Hallander, R-Rosendale, and State Rep. George Molinaro, D-Kenosha.

The center will serve as an operating headquarters for the UW's famed School for Workers, among other adult education programs.

Budgeted cost of the conversions of the dormitory — empty in the wake of student housing rules and preference changes on the Madison campus — is $675,000 under the law which authorized the creation and operation of the center.

Operating receipts of those adult educational programs housed in the center will help to repay the cost to the state for the dormitory and is conversion.

The School for Workers is operated for laborers and unions, and aims at giving workers modern concepts in labor-management relations. Other programs expected to use the facility include a farm group and bankers' programs operated during the summer months on the Madison campus.

Arsonist May Have Caused Fire at Deltox

Sprinklers Found Turned Off at Site Of Oshkosh Blaze

OSHKOSH — Arson is suspected in a fire which did major damage to the Deltox Rug Building at 35 Wisconsin St., Sunday evening.

The building is used as storage space for various town companies and houses the Apple Orchard Candle Factory.

According to Oshkosh Fire Department reports, the fire was reported at 9:24 p.m. Sunday. The report stated that when firemen arrived at the scene, the fire was burning in the southeast section of the building, in the roof area.

A sprinkler system in the area on fire had been turned off according to a fire department official who stated that a fire took place in the same area on Saturday. He said that one reason arson is suspected is because of the previous fire and the lack of the sprinkler hook-ip. The official stated that the fire department was not called to put out the fire on Saturday but that he was notified of the fire.

The Sunday fire was extinguished in one hour and 23 minutes with no injuries. Firemen cut holes in the roof to get at the blaze and entered adjoining buildings to prevent the spread of the flames.

Two companies of the fire department were again called to the building at 5:43 a.m. today by a policeman stationed at the building who found a section of wall smouldering. The wall section and part of the roof were again cut into to get at the fire.

According to fire department reports, had the sprinkler been operating in the section of the fire, it would have been greatly hindered by the way the packing cartons in storage had been stacked.

The fire damaged washing machines and dryers and some snowmobiles, according to fire department officials.

Fire Death Accidental, Coroner Says

Clarence Herzfeldt Died in Appleton Blaze on July 16

The death of Clarence L. Herzfeldt, 63, in a July 16 fire at an apartment house at 705 N. Appleton St., has been ruled accidental by the office of Outagamie County Coroner Bernard H. Kemps.

Laboratory analyses have been completed, Kemps said, indicating Herzfeldt died of an 82 per cent saturation of carbon monoxide poisoning, proving he was still alive when the fire started.

Kemps said speculation of foul play in the death has been ruled out by the police and fire departments and the coroner's office.

Herzfeldt, a retired Kimberly-Clark Corp. boiler room employe and watchman, was found fully dressed on the floor of his second-story room.

At the time the fire broke out about 10:15 p.m., only Herzfeldt and Albert Krueger, 64, who lived in a room adjacent to the victim's, were in the building.

Krueger was awakened by nearby church bells. He smelled smoke, grabbed his billfold and pushed out a window screen, crawling out onto a porch roof.

Krueger yelled to neighbors to call the fire department, which responded with four major units and a rescue squad.

Krueger stated that while he was on the roof he thought he heard Herzfeldt groan. Black smoke was coming from Herzfeldt's window at the time.

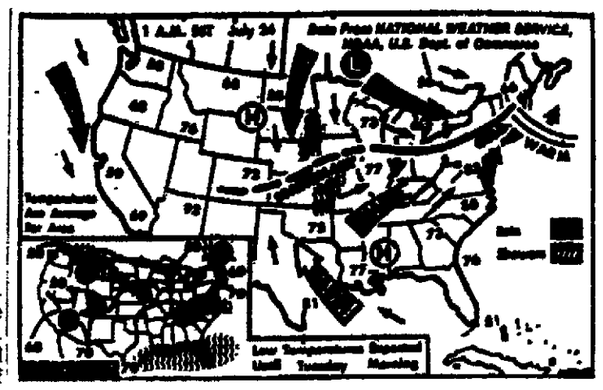

There were apparently six persons living in the two-story structure, which included three rooms and three apartments.

The agreement was ratified Thursday by the members of the union. It provides benefits of approximately 5½ per cent per hour for each contract year, in the form of wage increases and improved vacations. Other benefits include changes in pensions and insurance arrangements.

There are about 700 members in the bargaining unit.

Old Houses...

department is reasonable but firm in requiring the elimination of fire hazards in a house. "If a house is in reasonably good and liveable shape, we won't force changes," he said. "But if it's dilapidated, the wiring is bad, or the furnace is ready to blow up, we will."

This could mean providing two exits on the second floor (one may be a fire escape or a porch roof that allows a relatively small jump to the ground), installing 100-amp electrical service and safe fixtures and outlets.

The enforcement power for properties which seemingly would be exempt from the new code because they were built before it was set up "gets into the realm of whether the building is not fit for habitation," Atkins said.

He admitted that this was his personal opinion, and that there might be those who would disagree.

State Jurisdiction

Houses with more than two living units come under state jurisdiction. Van Handel, who until four years ago covered 15 counties, said enforcement also is a problem for him.

However, the old state building code, affecting structures built before 1926, also provided for fire safety. Van Handel estimated that probably over half of Appleton's buildings were built before then.

He has been in Appleton 21 years but he said that he had no way of knowing if the old buildings were meeting the old codes. Many have been improved to promote safety, he indicated, but there are "a large number of buildings" in this old-code category.

Van Handel noted that the state code is constantly being upgraded. He said he received changes "oft times every three or four months."

He said the old state code was necessarily inadequate but it "was concerned with buildings in that era."

Van Handel said that if buildings meet the code which was on the books at the construction time, "we can't touch them."

Man Faces One Charge In Molesting

30-Year-Old Also Reportedly Tried 3 Store Break-ins

A 30-year-old Appleton man was to be arraigned this afternoon on a charge of indecent behavior with a child after several incidents in the downtown area Saturday night.

According to police, the man was reported in two complaints of sexual molesting and three attempted break-ins.

The suspect was apprehended by police in Jones Park, where he molested an 18-year-old Appleton woman, police said.

Moments earlier, he had molested an 8-year-old girl in the 100 block of S. Walnut Street, the girl's mother told police.

According to police the attempted breakins were made at Lyman Shoes, 309 W. College Ave., where the glass in an aluminum door at the rear of the building was broken; Pah-Low's 303 W. College Ave.; and Tennie's Jewelry, 311 W. College Ave.

Entry was attempted through basement windows at Pah-Low's and Tennie's.

The only charges filed were in regard to the molesting of the 8-year-old girl, police said, although they still are investigating the other complaints.

Oshkosh Woman Hit in Sunday Night Break-in

OSHKOSH — An unidentified intruder entered the unlocked apartment of Mrs. Roy Baumann, knocked her unconscious when she awoke, and stole a small amount of cash Sunday night.

Mrs. Baumann, of 839 Greenwood Court, told officers that she was sleeping on a couch in the living room of her second floor apartment with the front door to the hall open. She said that her husband child were sleeping in a bedroom and some guests were swimming in an outside pool.

She said that she didn't know how long she had been asleep but was awakened by a noise she thought to be her husband. She said she turned her head to talk to him and was struck by something. The blow knocked her unconscious.

Mrs. Baumann was discovered on the counch by Gary Baumann who had been swimming.

He told officers that he came inside from the pool and on the way to the upstairs apartment he found his trousers on the top of the outside stairs. He said that $26 was missing from a wallet.

When he arrived in the apartment he found the floor fan that had been in the door tipped over and Mrs. Baumann unconscious.

Mrs. Baumann told officers that she did not get a look at the intruder's face and saw only that he was wearing dirty deck shoes.

A purse that had been lying on the floor had been rummaged through, but nothing was taken.

Dennis Johnson Fires Sub-Par 70, Wins Fox Cities Golf Title

BY GENE LILLGE
Post-Crescent Golf Editor

Dennis Johnson started three strokes back, carded five birdies on the front nine to take the lead and then waited for the field to try and catch him

No one did

The 31-year-old FBI agent added a 1-under-par 70 Sunday to his opening round score of 74 to win the sixth annual Post-Crescent sponsored Fox Cities Men's Amateur Golf Tournament at the Reid Golf Course.

Former champion John Lindberg finished two shots back, at 146, after his bid to catch Johnson was lost with a bogey on the 17th hole.

At 147, was 61-year-old Herb Stinski who ran into bogey trouble on the back nine after sharing the lead most of the final day.

Best Round

Kaukauna's Bill Heerman had the best round of the day Sunday, a 2-under-par 69, and beat defending champion Ted Donker and Don Jabas in a playoff for fourth after all three finished with 148 totals. Donker was fifth and Jabas sixth.

Rare Match-Ups Set Wednesday

Packer Job Competition Brisk

BY LEE REMMEL
Post Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — Considering they must live and labor in close and perspiring proximity daily, and more than a few are battling for survival at this training camp point, the Packers are an extraordinarily fraternal group

As a matter of fact, great camaraderie is evident on this 1972 squad between rookie and veteran, and rookie and rookie as well as among the veterans as a whole

But any resemblance to "Brotherhood Week" will be strictly accidental Wednesday night when the Pack becomes a house divided for the purpose of staging its annual intra-squad game at Lambeau Field

Brisk Competition

On that occasion, of necessity, it will be every man for himself There are jobs to be won and the competition is brisk, particularly in the offensive and defensive backfields and the defensive line.

Although some established veterans obviously do not need to be unduly concerned over their professional security, Coach Dan Devine is not inclined to award positions on the basis of seniority Totally committed to building a winner, he is interested only in performance

Judging by last Saturday's full-scale scrimmage, a free-hitting affair, this intelligence clearly has filtered down to the troops which suggest even more explosive moments are in prospect Wednesday night

Family Embroglio

Since contact between Packer offensive and defensive units is minimal once the exhibition schedule has started the intra-family embroglio will present a rarely seen collection of match-ups.

One of the most intriguing duels, by all odds, will find all pro guard Gale Gillingham paired with Mike McCoy, the huge defensive left tackle Gillingham, strongboy of the offensive line, is 6-3 and 262 pounds McCoy 6-5 and a svelt but multi-muscled 265 after lifting weights all winter.

Another major showdown will see the indestructible center, Ken Bowman, squaring off with middle linebacker Jim Carter, a swashbuckling third year performer who yields to none in his yen for contact

Other Confrontations

In other confrontations massive Bob Brown will be matched against Bill Lueck, premiere technician in the offensive line. Alden Roche, a stickout in all scrimmages to date, against Francie Peay (or Bill Hayhoe if Peay is not recovered from a knee injury suffered Saturday afternoon), and Clarence Williams off to a promising start this season, against Dick Himes

The game will also mark the full dress debut in Packer silks of MacArthur Lane, the brawny, superbly fit Californian acquired in the Donny Anderson trade, his appearance will underscore the horse race in progress at running back

Lane and the 3-year veteran Dave Hampton are contending for the starting assignment at left halfback, opposite that recent addition to the 1,000-Yard Club John Brockington, with uncommon gusto

Williams' Style

Also in the struggle here are veterans Perry Williams and Larry Krause and rookies Bob Hudson (Southwest Oklahoma) and Jesse Lakes (Central Michigan). Hudson, whose running style is somewhat reminiscent of the departed Travis Williams, has shown flashes of promise

Rookie defensive end Dave Purefory likewise will be in the spotlight Despite his evident inexperience, Purefory has

All-Star Game Tonight

Clinton Ends Foxes' Streak

BY DAN VANDERPAS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The Clinton Pilots came up with a 14-hit barrage to end the Appleton Foxes' winning streak at six games with a 7-5 win over Appleton at Goodland Field Sunday afternoon.

The Midwest League all-star game will be played tonight at Witter Field, Wisconsin Rapids. The Foxes will be represented by Lamar Johnson, Mike Reynolds, Paul Patterson and Mike Buskey. After the 2-day all-star break, the Foxes return to league action at Waterloo Wednseday.

Appleton delighted the 773 "Elks Day" fans by scoring the first run of the game in the second inning Catcher George Enright had the key blow — a line double to right field — and he advanced to third on a throwing error He later scored on a wild pitch.

Clinton tied the count at 1-1 in the third when Kim Cates singled off starter and loser Paul Patterson (8-8) to drive in Bill Michael. Steve Litras and Michael slammed 1-baggers to start the surge

Grab 3-2 Lead

Appleton grabbed a 3-2 advantage in the bottom of the inning after two were out Dan Rourke started the rally by beating out an infield grounder. Mike Buskey countered with a base hit to left, and Bobby Bridges slashed a line 2-bagger to right allowing Rourke and Buskey to touch home Bridges advanced to third on a throwing error, but he was stranded there as the inning ended.

The Pilots took a permanent lead in the fifth frame by

Red's Pitcher

Simpson Reports Bribe Attempt

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Federal and local authorities were seeking an anonymous telephone caller who Cincinnati Reds pitcher Wayne Simpson said offered him a bribe to throw a weekend game with Pittsburgh.

Wayne Simpson

Simpson, who pitched six innings in the Reds 6-3 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday night, said he received the call about noon Saturday at a local hotel.

Simpson said he spoke about five minutes with the man, who he said identified himself only as "Louie

"The guy called up and said he wanted me to throw the game, Simpson recalled Sunday. "He said that if I came through he'd make sure two $1,000 bills were under my door after the game.

The Cincinnati pitcher reported the call immediately to Reds Manager Sparky Anderson and the FBI and local police were later notified

Braves, Giants Triumph

Clemente, Stargell KO Reds, 3-2

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Roberto Clemente, according to Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson, "might be the best player in baseball for one day When he has to perform—like in the World Series when he wanted to prove he was the best—you see what he does"

Sunday was one of those days for Pittsburgh's brilliant right fielder his first game in two weeks since being knocked out of action by an intestinal virus

Clemente knocked in the game-tying run with an eighth-inning single—his second run batted in of the battle between the National League's division leaders—and moments later scored the winner on Willie Stargell's double as the Pirates slipped past the Reds 3-2

Phillies Win

Elsewhere, in the National League, Philadelphia downed Los Angeles 2-0, San Francisco defeated the New York Mets 5-2 Houston beat the Chicago Cubs 6-5, Atlanta edged St Louis 3-2 and in a doubleheader Montreal swept San Diego 2-1 and 9-1

In the American Leagueo the Chicago White Sox took two from Cleveland 2-1 and 4-3, Minnesota did the same to Milwaukee winning 3-0 and 6-5 Baltimore belted Kansas City 8-4, California whipped the New York Yankees 6-3, Oakland beat Boston 6-3 and Texas topped Detroit 3-1

The victory by the Bucs—and Cincinnati's setback, of course—gave each team a 55-33 record for a winning percentage of .625, the best in the majors

A year ago at the All-Star break, Pittsburgh owned a nine-game lead in the East Division while the Reds were stumbling along in fifth place in the West Now the Pirates' lead is 5½ games and Cincinnati's is six

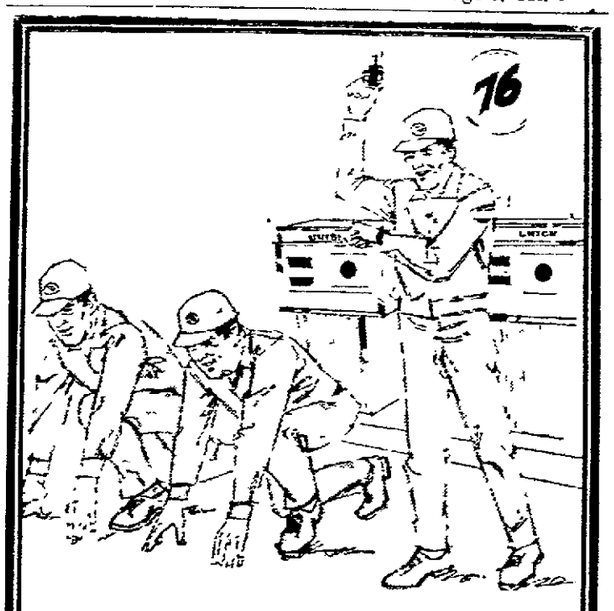

But for Clemente, who won the Babe Ruth Award as the outstanding player in the 1971

Namath Set to Go for Jets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The latest edition of The Joe Namath Frolics at Training Camp gets its first rehearsal today.

The controversial star quarterback for the New York Jets of the National Football League reported to the Jets camp in Hempstead, N.Y. Sunday. He said he "felt good" and wanted to "get everything under way."

Namath is scheduled to test his much-operated on knees in a workout today and hold a press conference.

His appearance brought a new spirit to the Jets camp.

"When oJe's around there's an added incentive," said tight end Rich Caster "Spectators at our practices will triple and the guys will start working harder."

Elsewhere, the Baltimore Colts traded wide receiver Eldridge Dickey to the Kansas City Chiefs for an undisclosed draft choice and the Dallas Cowboys dealt linebacker Tom Stincic to the New Orleans Saints for a high draft choice next year.

Some Disputes

Disputes over some players contracts still existed as the official opening of the pre-season exhibition season approached. That will pit the Super Bowl championship Cowboys against the College All-Stars in Chicago Friday night.

The Colts reported they were "as far apart as you can be from lineman Bubba Smith who wants to renegotiate his contract" which has a year to run. "It is against management policy to renegotiate any contract before it expires," a Colt spokesman said.

Grim on Block

New York Giants were reported to be making efforts to trade Bob Grim, star pass-catching end obtained from Minnesota in the deal that sent quarterback Fran Tarkenton to the Vikings. Grim has been holding out for more money.

The New England Patriots have told veteran running back Jim Nance they no longer need his services. The team said that it has worked out a deal for Nance but that the deal hinges on Nance's agreeing to a pay cut with the undisclosed new club. Nance's salary is rumored to be over $80,000.

Kaukauna Wins, Appleton Loses In Legion Meet

STURGEON BAY — The Appleton Legion baseball team was edged, 1-0, and Kaukauna posted a 9-1 victory in first round action of the Region 4 tournament here Sunday.

Sturgeon Bay downed Appleton in the double elimination meet with an unearned run in the bottom of the sixth inning. Kaukaua's victory was recorded over Green Bay East.

In other games played Sunday, Green Bay West topped Seymour, 2-0, and Green Bay Southport posted a 5-3 victory over Ashwaubenon.

Action continues tonight with Ashwaubenon playing Seymour at 5:30 p.m. and Appleton and Green Bay East clashing at 8 p.m. In Tuesday's games, Southport faces Green Bay West at 5:30 p.m. and Kaukauna goes against Sturgeon Bay at 8 p.m.

Mark Woerfel, of Sturgeon Bay, allowed Appleton just three hits while striking out 12 batters and walking four. Jeff Bergsbaken was the loser and he also struck out 12, walked only one and allowed four hits.

The lone run of the game came in the sixth when Steve Holtz of Sturgeon Bay led off with a single, Greg Sunstrom followed with another single and Holtz went to third. On the next pitch, Sunstrom tried to steal second base and on the throw down, the ball went into the outfield and Holtz romped home from third with the winning run.

Gary Van Handel hurled the Kaukauna win over Green Bay East. Van Handel struck out nine and allowed just four hits. Warren Hacker and Phil Janssen had three hits each for Kaunkauna.

North All-Stars Defeat South in Legion Contest

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pitching dominated the first annual Wisconsin American Legion All-Star Game during the weekend as the North edged out the South 1-0 on an unearned run.

Brad Walters of Marinette walked in the fifth inning Saturday, stole second, moved to third on an infield hit by Tom Anderson of Green Bay and scored on a throwing error.

The South threatened in the bottom of the seventh inning by loading the bases before Scott Ohrmundt of Wausau struck out a South batter to end the game.

Phil Klismith of Stevens Point, who allowed one hit in two innings, was the winning pitcher as five hurlers worked for the North and four for the South.

The game was played following the conclusion of the Milwaukee Brewers-Minnesota Twins major league contest at Milwaukee County Stadium.

Manawa Beats Marion, 8-5

MANAWA — A 5-run outburst keyed Manawa to a 8-5 American Legion baseball win over Marion.

Bruce Strachaska and Malcolm Bailey each had two hits for the winners while Kent Brandenburg, Greg Hintz, Ken Knitt and Ron Krueger had a pair for Marion.

Marion will play Niagra at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Marinette Regional tournament. Clintonville opens its tourney slate with a 5:30 p.m. game against Shawano Friday.

Fox Lake Inmates Stage Quiet Protest

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Patrick Lucey will probably meet with prisoners at the Fox Lake correctional institution if the inmates feel it is necessary to see the governor personally, Lucey's legal advisor said today.

Allen Williams said the governor's office was trying to ascertain whether several dozen inmates at the institution got the impression during a meeting Sunday night that Lucey was planning to visit the prison today.

"It, in fact, a large number of people believe he will go because of statements I made, I believe he will go," Williams said.

The governor's legal aid went to the prison to receive a list of demands from prison inmates who were protesting the death of an asthmatic prisoner, 20-year-old Larry Crape of Milwaukee. The 10-hour protest ended without violence after the demands were given to Williams.

Williams said a National Guard doctor had been sent to the prison today to take the place of the regular prison doctor, who is reportedly on vacation.

The governor's office was in the process of appointing a number of doctors to review the coroners' inquest report on Crape's death, Williams said, and was trying to find medical personnel to review medical procedures at the prison.

The office is also trying to find an ambulance which can be permanently stationed at the prison, he said.

Demonstrators said there is inadequate ambulance service between the Dodge County institution and Beaver Dam hospitals, where inmates are taken when in need of special treatment.

A list of nine demands from demonstrators called for an investigation of the Crape death, and a parallel investigation into the death a year ago of an inmate who had suffered from cancer.

Gene Messina, a counsel on the governor's legal staff, said an autopsy showed lung congestion was involved in Crape's death.

Crape collapsed in his room. He was pronounced dead at a Beaver Dam hospital, having been given first aid by an inmate nurse while waiting for an ambulance, Messina said.

James Boorman, security director at the limited-security penitentiary, said 75-150 of Fox Lake's 458 inmates participated in the protest, seeking an audience with a spokesman for the governor.

No Violence

He said inmates gathered in a recreation area from about 11 a.m. until nearly 9 p.m., then returned to their dormitories without having caused violence.

Inmates also talked with State Rep. Thomas S. Hanson and Dr. Paul Glunz of Beaver Dam, a member of the governor's commission on penal rehabilitation.

The demonstrators' list requested an overhaul of the 10-year-old institution's medical staff, employment of interns at the prison's medical facility, an improved ambulance service and 24-hour availability of a physician.

Other demands ranged from a request for criminal charges against prison medical personnel concerning the Crape death to having the governor's office inform the public of the demands.

Inmates also demanded that demonstration participants not have to undergo disciplinary measures, such as transfer to nearby Waupun State Prison.

Ulster Death Toll Continues Climbing

BELFAST (AP) — A sniper killed another British soldier in Belfast today, while a civilian died and four were wounded in a crossifre in Londonderry.

The soldier was shot at an army post on the edge of the Roman Catholic Ballymurphy district. His was the 473rd confirmed death in the three years of religious warfare in Northern Ireland, and the 103rd British soldier to die.

British troops raided two Catholic housing estates in Armagh, southwest of Belfast, and arrested 10 persons for questioning. Sweeps in Catholic areas of Belfast on Sunday turned up more than 700 pounds of gelignite and other explosives.

The casualties in Londonderry were passengers in a car caught between British troops and snipers during one of three gun battles in Northern Ireland's second city.

Two other battles broke out when guerrillas attacked army posts in Londonderry with rifle fire and nail bombs. The Army said troops hit three gunmen and no soldiers were hurt.

In Belfast, militant Protestants stepped up pressure on Britain to hit back harder at the Irish Republican Army guerrillas they blamed for a weekend of bloodshed that left 18 dead.

Leaders of the right-wing Vanguard Movement called a civil disobedience campaign including refusal to pay rents and local taxes.

A spokesman for the paramilitary Ulster Defense Association—which claims it can muster 43,000 trained volunteers—warned it would attack IRA strongholds within a week.

There were signs the British government was also ready to take a tougher stance against the IRA.

Britain's administrator for Northern Ireland, William Whitelaw, and Defense Secretary Lord Carrington had talks with Prime Minister Edward Heath, and it was believed a new hard-line strategy was mapped out.

Breeze Gives Some Relief To East Coast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Winds drove a stubborn mass of hot, stagnant air from the Northeast today, blowing away weekend automobile exhaust and industrial pollution that irritated coastal cities last week.

Washington was the only metropolitan area on the Atlantic Coast still on pollution alert but environmental engineers said it might be cancelled this afternoon if the winds keep up.

Authorities extended the week-old alert after measuring exhaust fumes of autos returning from Maryland and Virginia beaches. Commuters were urged to leave their cars home today if possible.

Wind gusts stirred the air over New York City on Sunday and lowered the smog reading to a level deemed "good" by the city Air Resources Department. The department forecast "acceptable" air quality today.

Winds were 15 miles per hour in other parts of the Northeast as the week-old stagnant air mass, weakening somewhat, blew south and west.

Dam Breaks Above Minnesota Town

MORA, Minn. (AP) — Water was rising today on the streets of Mora after torrential weekend rains crumbled a dam in the Snake River Valley above the central Minnesota town.

Sheriff George Anderson at Mora said water was about 18 inches deep in some of the areas of the town of 2,500.

"It wasn't exactly a wall of water that came down when the Knife Lake Dam crumbled," Anderson said, "but there was a lot of water.

"The lake behind the dam was a couple of miles long and about a mile and one-half wide," he said.

Those in danger areas were warned to move to higher ground during the night, he said.

Anderson said he could not estimate how many people had evacuated.

Weekend rainfalls that dropped as much as 10 inches in some areas of central Minnesota washed out sections of major highways and isolated small towns.

Underindustrialized China may be, but it is not underdeveloped in Western terms. A glimpse of the competition China will give the Japanese and others in Asia can be seen in a tour of an arts and crafts factory employing more than a thousand persons in a loft-type building lacking any air-conditioning. The workers keep to a pace far beyond that usually seen in the West. They produce items ranging from dolls costing less than $1 to carved jade items aimed for the $100,000 market.

In one room with 50 or more cutting lathes a worker sat at his bench carving a large jade piece. It will take him two years and be sold for $90,000.

Report of Gallup Poll

Youth Prefer Nixon to McGovern

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)—Sen. George S. McGovern's plan to spur voter registration among the young might hurt his chances for the presidency, according to the Gallup Poll.

A poll released Sunday indicates that while McGovern leads President Nixon by 57 to 41 per cent among registered voters in the 18-to 24 year-old bracket, the president holds a 46 to 43 per cent edge among the nonregistered voters in that bracket.

Two per cent of those registered and 11 per cent of those not registered were undecided.

The poll indicates the South Dakota senator currently holds a 1.8 million lead among registered young voters, but the lead would be cut to 600,000 if noncollege youth registered at the same rate as college youths.

The poll showed support for McGovern far stronger on the campuses than off. The collegians surveyed chose McGovern 61 to 35 per cent, while noncollege youth preferred the President 48 to 44 per cent.

The poll appeared to back the claim of those Nixon supporters who said their candidate, and not McGovern, would benefit most by registering the young.

One McGovern backer questioned the accuracy of the findings, which were based on 1,553 interviews conducted between April 21 and June 19.

Max Factor III noted that part of the poll was conducted before McGovern's primary victories in California and elsewhere, and that all of it was conducted prior to the Democratic convention.

"What's missing here is the recognition factor," he said. "College kids, especially in the primary states, have been better aware of who George McGovrn is. Noncollege kids are only beginning to find out. More and more will hear of him, and be for him, by the election."

Couple Wed 77 Years

DARLINGTON, Wis. (AP) — William Andrews, 100, and his wife Hattie, 95, celebrated their 77th wedding anniversary today.

Andrews, when asked by newsmen Sunday whether 77 years of marriage had proved wearing, said things got "pretty easy" after the first two or three years.

But Mrs. Andrews declined to sit close to her husband for a picture.

"Oh, I quit that sort of thing a long time ago," she said.

The couple has lived on their 67-acre rural Darlington farm since 1902.

"You know, on television the other day they claimed it cost up to $25,000 to educate a child up to age 18," Andrews said. "But I never heard anybody say how much it costs to feed a woman for 75 years."

"After talking with him, do you wonder that I'm deaf?" retored the former Hattie Statzer, chuckling.

The couple had seven children, five of whom are still living. There are 51 grandchildren, 48 great-grandchildren and seven great-great-grandchildren.

Chisox Take Pair; Rangers Post 3-1 Win Over Detroit

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Texas Rangers stopped Detroit's three game winning streak Sunday and trimmed the Tigers' lead over Baltimore in the American League's East to one game

Texas tallied three times in the first inning and then protected its lead behind the four-hit pitching of Rich Hand and Horacia Pina for a 3-1 victory.

Elsewhere Baltimore trimmed Kansas City 8-4, Oakland downed Boston 6-3, California beat the New York Yankees 6-3, the Chicago White Sox took two from Cleveland 2-1 and 4-3, and the Minnesota Twins swept a pair over Milwaukee 3-0 and 6-5

Ted Ford doubled home Texas' first two runs off Tom Timmerman and scored on Joe Lovitto's single. Meanwhile, Hand blanked the Tigers on two hits until the seventh, when a walk and one-out singles by Norm Cash and Gates Brown produced Detroit's run. Pina stymied the threat by retiring Mickey Stanley and Ed Brinkman on fly balls.

Baltimore jumped on Kansas City's Dick Drago for four runs in the first inning on a walk, Bobby Grich's triple, Boog Powell's single and Don Baylor's homer and Terry Crowley crashed a decisive grand slam home run off Roger Nelson in the seventh

Score Four Runs

The Royals scored their four runs in the eighth on a walk, doubles by Ed Kirkpatrick, Bobby Knoop and Paul Schaal and Steve Hovley's sacrifice fly before Grant Jackson, the fourth Baltimore pitcher of the inning, slammed the door

Oakland broke a 2-2 tie against Boston with three runs in the seventh inning with a walk, a wild pitch, another walk and a passed ball setting things up Mike Hegan drove in the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly. Bert Campaneris delivered another with a single and Campy came around on singles by Joe Rudi and Reggie Jackson

Chisox Sweep

The A's hold a 6½-game lead over the White Sox, who posted a pair of ninth-inning victories over Cleveland, taking the opener on Jay Johnstone's pinch single and the nightcap on Carlos May's second home run of the game

Dick Allen and Ed Herrmann also homered for Chicago. Alex Johnson and Buddy Bell for Cleveland. Wilbur Wood bested 16-game winner Gaylord Perry in the opener in a battle of All-Star pitchers

Ken McMullen's three-run homer in the first inning and Andy Kosco's solo smash in the fifth powered California past New York, despite Horace Clarke's four hits for the Yankees. The Angels had scored only two runs in five previous games in New York.

Clinton scored three more times in the sixth to take a 7-3 lead Winning pitcher Fred Bruntrager walked and Litras slammed a single to left to send Patterson to the showers.

Michael worked reliever Jeff Holly for a bunt single to load the sacks. Weisse, who went 3-for-5 on the afternoon, lined a single to right to drive Bruntrager and Litras across

After an infield out and an intentional walk to Cates, Dave Diamond came in to pitch to pinch-hitter Doug Tatford But Diamond fired a wild pitch to send Michael home.

The Foxes came back to slice the deficit to 7-5 in the eighth After Rourke walked and Buskey singled to center, Bruntrager was relieved by Bob Flanders, who walked Bridges to load the bases

Lamar Johnson was issued free transportation to force in a run, and Fred Norton plated Buskey with an infield out

World Series, the '72 series wasn't foremost in his mind after Sunday's game. The All-Star Game was. He's scheduled to be a starting outfielder but isn't sure if he'll play.

"Don't Know"

"I don't know," the 38-year-old star said. "It's day-to-day—but if I go to the All-Star Game, I'm going to play I won't make the trip for nothing."

Clemente, who dropped nine pounds below playing weight during his bout with the virus, added: "Right now I don't feel tired. But I have to wait until tomorrow to see for sure. I haven't played in a long time."

Steve Carlton raised his record to 14-6 with his ninth straight victory and fourth shutout of the season, a five-hitter. The Phillies' ace left-hander also raised his strikeout total to 201, best in the majors, by fanning six Dodgers.

Two Run Triple

And as if that wasn't enough, Carlton drove in the only runs of the game with a two-run, two-out triple in the seventh inning

Tom Seaver was sailing along with a 2-0 lead and a one-hitter until the Giants jumped on him with two away in the fifth inning on Ken Henderson's solo homer, singles by Chris Arnold and Pitcher Ron Bryant and Bobby Bonds" three-run clout.

And that was more than enough for Bryant, who won his sixth straight game with a four-hitter. But he also helped the Mets a bit, committing three errors, one short of the modern major league record for errors in a game by a pitcher.

"I was trying extra hard 'cause I was going against Seaver," the San Francisco hurler said.

Game-Winning Hit

Johnson Wins 'Fox Cities'

bogeys on the par 35 first nine At the turn he was even par for the tournament while Stinski was plus one and Lindberg, the 1968 Fox Cities king, was plus two.

Johnson dropped birdie putts of four, five, 15, seven and 10 feet on his opening nine

The dark-haired Butte des Morts ace started with a birdie on the 490-yard first hole after chipping to four feet from the sand He bogeyed the par three second after being forced to hit a left-handed shot from a bush near a protective shelter.

Johnson birdied the par four third with a 5-footer, parred the fourth, and bogeyed the fifth after missing a 3-foot par putt

3 Straight Birdies

The bespectacled linkster then ran off three straight birdies to go to even par for the tourney

"There was no use in playing conservative," Johnson said later. "I just wanted to keep charging"

Stinski was only one shot back after a birdie on the 305-yard third and bogey on the par four fifth

Lindberg carded two birdies against two bogeys and a double bogey for a two over 37 on the front and trailed Johnson by two shots with nine holes left

The three were tied through 12 holes

Johnson bogeyed the 11th and 12th to go plus two, while Stinski scrambled for pars on 10 and 11 and made bogey on 12 after hitting out of a concrete drainage ditch, and Lindberg had birdie — bogey — par to stay at plus two

"I knew I had a chance" Lindberg said at that point

Johnson took the lead for good when he rolled in a 10-foot birdie putt on the 385-yard 13th He missed the green for a bogey on 14 and then parred in Johnson made his "most important putt" of the tournament when he dropped a 12-foot par putt after hitting over he green in two

Stinski faded with bogeys on 14 15 and 17 while Lindberg was only one shot back after a birdie on the par five 16th

Lindberg knowing he needed birdies on the last three holes to win, trying to steer an eight iron to the green on the 140-yard 17th, but hit it left

The former champ did not quit after his bogey on 17 After hitting his tee shot between some trees on the 18th he chipped to the green and watched as his ball rolled just past the pin

Lindberg and Johnson both finished with 75s Sunday

'Some Good Breaks'

"I had some good breaks," Johnson said in looking back at his round

Johnson the fifth Fox Cities winner, had to win the meet in order to keep a promise to his pretty wife Betty

"I told her if she let me play I'd win a prize for her," Johnson chuckled As the wife of the winner, she received the "Patience Award"

Lindberg described his round as "a real scrambling one" and felt lucky to finish runnerup I didn't play well enough to win and was fortunate to finish second" the Butte des Morts ace added

"I can't kick," the veteran Stinski said afterwards "I made some mistakes, but I'm happy

Pete Culver carded a one over par 72 Sunday to win the A Flight by a shot over Jed Phillips Culver totaled 153 for the meet Phillips added a 73 to his opening round of 81 Syl Bayer was third at 155 with an 83-72

Third Playoff Hole

John Russo edged Don Whyte on the third playoff hole to win the B Flight Russo and Whyte finished regulation with 163 totals Russo had 87 and 76 while Whyte scored 77 Sunday and 86 in Saturday's opening action

Joel Hervat picked up a par on the first sudden death hole to top Jack Snyder for C Flight honors Hervat had 83 Sunday for a 175 score while Snyder toured 93 and 82 for his 175 mark

Stinski defended his seniors crown with a 147 total while Pete Gorski won the juniors division with an 80-76 156 score

Yancey Wins American Test

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — "I guess maybe missing those two cuts in a row was a blessing in disguise," Bert Yancey said

The former West Point cadet had just outlasted surprising Tom Olozas in a sudden-death playoff for the title and the $30,000 first prize Sunday in the American Golf Classic.

He was discussing a recent slump which hit rock bottom when he failed to qualify for the final two rounds in recent tournaments at Chicago and

"Jolted Me"

"It jolted me," said Yancey, for years one of the steadiest players on the tour. "I said to myself, 'Hey, you better start getting some blisters on your hands, start working some'"

So he went on a regimen of practice, work, practice, work It paid off in the innervating muggy heat that settled over the 7,180-yard Firestone Country Club course like a hot, wet blanket

He blew a three-stroke lead on the final day with a two-over-par 72 and found himself tied at the end of the regulation 72 holes with Ulozas, a 29-year-old tour sophomore Each had a four-under-par total of 276, Ulozas after a final round of 68

On the first playoff hole, a 230-yard par three, both eached the green. Yancey lagged up two feet short. Ulozas, putting from about 30 feet, boldly ran his first putt three feet past, then missed it coming back.

The 33-year-old Yancey tapped his in and the slump was over

"I never wanted to win a tournament this one." said Yancey, who had scored the last of his previous six victories some 18 months ago in the 1970 Bing Crosby.

'Kille-r-Brews' Homers Are Fatal

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Minnesota Twins and Milwaukee Brewers have reached the All-Star break with opposite momentum, thanks—or no thanks—to a slighted slugger and the least celebrated half of the Perry brother act.

Jim Perry, whose brother, Gaylord, of the Cleveland Indians has been one of the pitching sensations of the year, needed ninth inning relief help but set the Brewers down on four hits for a 3-0 Twins triumph Sunday

Harmon Killebrew, who broke up a scoreless duel between Perry and loser Jim Lonborg (8-5) with a sixth inning home run, came back with another homer, No 530 lifetime, in the doubleheader nightcap The Twins needed every foot of it to hold on for a 6-5 win as the Brewers charged back on George Scott's three run home run in the ninth

The sweep sent the Twins to the three-day break with a three-game winning streak following their 9-5 victory Saturday The Brewers had won the first two games of the five-game series

Killebrew, who has played in 13 All-Star games, was bypassed for this year's American League team despite his 15 homers, but said he wasn't disappointed

"It would have been nice to go, but some of the other guys have been having good years and deserve to go, too," he said "I feel fortunate to have gone most of the time"

The Twins wrapped up their first game victory with two eighth inning runs on singles by Cesar Tovar, Danny Thompson, Steve Braun and Rich Reese

They chased loser Earl Stephenson (2-4) with two runs in the first of the nightcap on a bases loaded walk to Bobby Darwin and sacrifice fly by Rick Soderholm.

Dave Goltz who went on to win his first major league start singled in a fourth inning run and the Twins made it 4-0 with Killebrew's second homer of the day in the fifth.

But Ellie Rodriguez cut it to 4-2 with a two-run homer in the seventh that chased Goltz Darwin boosted the Twins' lead to 6-2 with a two-run single in the ninth before the Brewers made their final bid in their half on a walk, a single by Ron Theobald and Scott's 10th home run

Bobby Allison Takes 500-Mile Atlanta Race

Hulme Winner at Watkins Glen

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer

Denis Hulme, auto racing's "Golden Bear," says he hasn't fully recovered from a jarring wreck he had in Atlanta two weeks ago. You'd never have guessed it.

The 37-year-old New Zealander climbed back into his Gulf-McLaren at Watkins Glen, N.Y., Sunday and did what McLaren drivers have done in 40 of the last 46 Can-Am road races—he romped to a wire-to-wire victory.

Not only that, 1971 series champion Pete Revson rode his partner's slipstream across the finish line by 1.4 seconds to nail second place. It was the 28th time since 1966 that McLaren team cars have finished 1-2 in a race.

Hulme, who won the world driving title in 1967 and still is a McLaren contender in Formula 1 Grand Prix racing, added $17,900 to the $612,545 he already has taken out of the Can-Am series.

Busiest Driver

If Hulme was still a bit out of sorts, it wasn't the case with determined Bobby Allison, America's busiest driver.

The oldest of two driving brothers from Hueytown, Ala., alertly drove by old pro David Pearson as the latter scooted down pit road in a 500 mile stock car race at Atlanta, and went on to snatch his fifth major victory of the season.

Allison, driving a Junior Johnson Chevrolet, led the final 140 miles to pick up the winner's check of $15,000.

Pearson, seeking his fifth triumph in the Wood Brothers' Mercury, had taken advantage of a yellow light slowdown to make a quick pit stop while leading by about four seconds. But the green racing flag dropped as he scooted back into action, and by that time Allison had taken over the lead for good.

Allison's margin over second place Richard Petty's Plymouth was 12 seconds. Pearson was credited with third.

Yankee 250 Race

Roger McCluskey of Tucson, Ariz., outdueled Bay Darnell of Deerfield, Ill. to win the Yankee 250 stock car race at Indianapolis Raceway Park.

Driving a 1971 Plymouth, McCluskey averaged 78.803 m.p.h. over the twisting 2½-mile track. He trailed Darnell by as much as 63 seconds after a long pit stop to replace a bad coil on the 67th lap, but roared back to take the lead for good with four laps to go. Darnell drove a 1972 Dodge.

In other weekend action, U.S. star Mario Andretti teamed with Belgium Grand Prix ace Jacky Ickx to win a six-hour race at Watkins Glen Saturday. It was the final event in the World Championship of Makes series and Ferrari won all nine of the races for which points were offered.

Gary Bettenhausen, a driver for Roger Penske's McLaren team in United States Auto Club championships vents, took time out to win history's richest midget race before more than 30,000 at John F. Kennedy Stadium in Philadelphia.

Bettenhausen collected $5,310 for his off-beat ride.

British Ports Struck, Other Unions Follow

LONDON (AP) — Striking longshoremen shut down all major British ports today to protest the jailing of five London dock workers for defying the nation's new labor court. Thousands of workers in other industries struck in sympathy.

By noon most of the country's 42,000 longshoremen had joined the stoppage that began Friday in London, Liverpool and Hull. Men in Southhampton, Manchester, Glasgow, Bristol, Swansea, Ipswich and other ports walked out today.

Miners, printers, automobile workers and truck drivers also struck today in a massive show of support for the jailed men.

Motor Freight

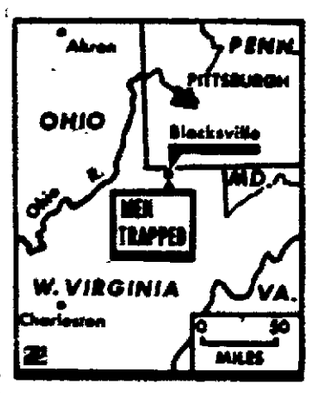

The leader of the truck drivers' union predicted a total stoppage of motor freight within 48 hours. Nearly 5,000 miners walked out in South Wales, Scotland and Yorkshire.

Striking printers prevented publication of London newspapers Sunday and again today. More than 400 fish market porters walked out in Grimbsy.

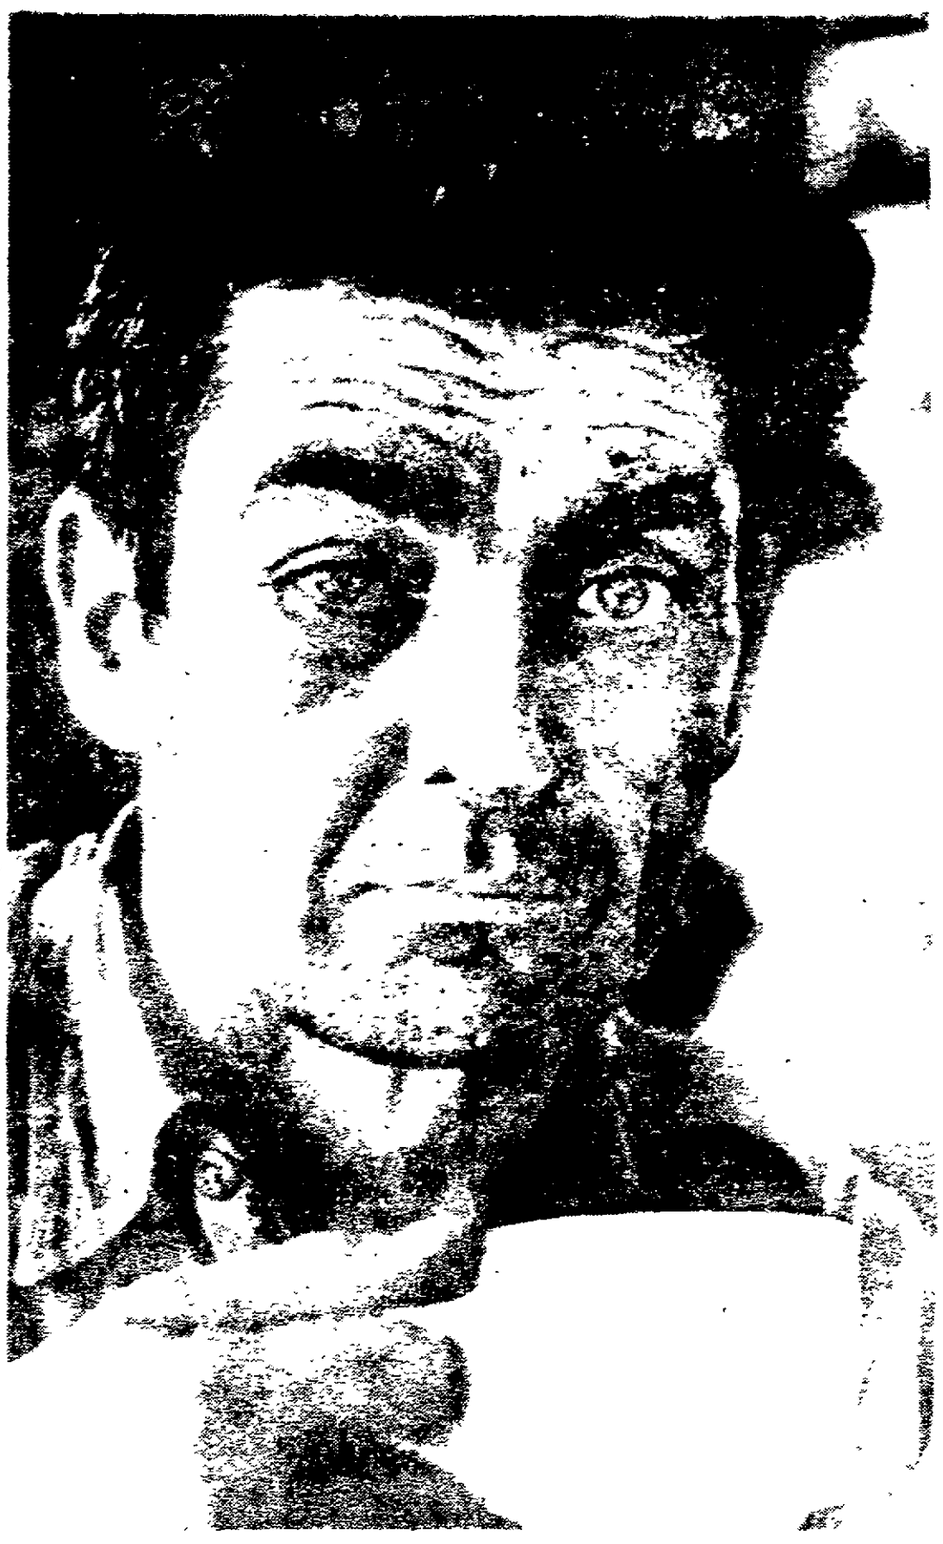

The pound dropped sharply on foreign exchange markets, and prices tumbled on the stock exchange. The dock strike was certain to reduce the exports which Britain needs to bolster her ailing economy, and the sympathy strikes will cut production if they continue.

The five dock workers were ordered to London's Pentonville Prison on Friday for refusing to obey an order from the National Industrial Relations Court to halt the illegal picketing of a container freight company. They were the first union members jailed by the court, which was set up earlier this year under the new Industrial Relations Act.

The Trades Union Congress planned to urge Heath to release the longshoremen and suspend the act in order to defuse the crisis. However, the government's attitude is that the men are in prison not for their union activities but for defying a court order and it cannot interfere with the judiciary.

Drilling Delays Hinder Mine Rescue Attempt

Section Foreman Donald Smouse, 39, pauses for a cup of coffee after fighting for 11 hours to free miners trapped by fire in Blacksville No. 1 mine, Blacksville, W. Va. Smouse was in the first team to enter the mine. (AP Wirephoto)

BLACKSVILLE, W. Va. (AP) — Rescue workers encountered problems today which delayed drilling of a five-inch hole into a burning coal mine where nine men have been trapped since Saturday night.

Meanwhile, hope faded that the miners would be found alive.

A predawn equipment breakdown caused one delay in the drilling. Then, later in the morning, the bit became stuck and the drilling again came to a halt.

When the bit stuck the shaft had been drilled to a depth of 624 feet, and a hole 730 feet deep was needed to intercept the mine at the point where the men were believed to have been trapped.

Glances Slim

There has been no word from the nine since shortly after the fire started. Officials of the Consolidation Coal Co.'s Blacksville No. 1 mine said Sunday night chances the men would be found alive were "quite dim."

"I don't think I am stating anything but a fact," said John Corcoran, Consolidation president. He called the situation a tragedy.

Officials said 31 of the 40 men doing maintenance work in the four-mile mine reached safety within minutes after the fire broke out.

The bore hole was being drilled in an attempt to reach the men or possibly communicate with them. Failing that, officials hoped to learn something about conditions in the mine 650 feet below the rolling hills of this West Virginia-Pennsylvania border community.

An official of the U.S. Bureau of Mines said temperatures in the immediate area of the fire probably were between 2,500 and 3,000 degrees fahrenheit.

Corcoran said at a news conference he felt conditions for rescuing the trapped miners were not favorable.

Efforts Hampered

Rescue efforts have been hampered by the fire which continues to burn in the soft coal veins that underlie the area.

Efforts to put the fire out with foam have been stymied because workers were unable to get behind the flames.

The fire started when a heavy piece of mining machinery being relocated in the main corridor about a mile from the lone elevator shaft hit a live electrical wire, generating sparks.

The fire had been localized Sunday night in an area of about 400 square feet less than a mile from the mine entrance, Consolidation officials said.

Corcoran told newsmen that some members of the missing men's families were keeping a vigil around the entrance to the mine.

Officials said more than 100 rescue workers divided into 14 teams, were involved in the search.

Always Hope

"There is always hope," said Leonard Pnakovich, vice president and spokesman for the United Mine Workers of America.

Pnakovich placed the blame for the fire squarely with the company. He accused Consolidation of being negligent in failing to enforce a state mining law requiring evacuation of miners from an area where heavy machinery is being moved.

Corcoran answered. "There is a legal requirement...that workmen do not go in by the air currents where a machine is being moved. It would appear that on this particular occasion some of the men were where the machine was being moved. Why they were there, we don't know."

The trapped miners were identified as Terrance Stoneking, 29, and Frederick Phillips, 42, both of Mount Morris, Pa.; and Justin A. Beach Jr., 23, Conrad J. Belt, 34, Billy Murray, 37, Roy Sisler, 24, Roy Dalton, 42, Kenneth Haynes, 21, and Robert Tressler, 32, all of Morgantown.

Syria Pressured To Oust Soviets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Syrian government is under pressure to follow Egypt's lead and expel Soviet military advisers, but the Syrian Communist party has threatened to quit the government if it does, the right-wing Beirut newspaper Al Hayat reported today.

It said Nasserite groups in the coalition government dominated by the Baath Socialist party are pressing for expulsion of the Russians as an "expression of solidarity and coordination with Egypt."

Syria is a partner with Egypt and Libya in the Federation of Arab Republics, and pro-Egyptian parties hold eight of the 28 Syrian cabinet posts.

President Hafez Assad of Syria was reported by the Arab press last month to have returned from a visit to the Soviet Union as disillusioned as Egypt's President Anwar Sadat with Moscow's reluctance to supply offensive weapons to the Arabs.

Red Ministers

Khaled Bakdash, secretary-general of the Syrian Communist party, threatened in a note to Assad to withdraw the two Communist ministers from the cabinet if the Soviets were expelled, Al Hayat reported.

Since the Egyptian expulsion announcement Tuesday, the Communists have boycotted meetings of the Syrian National Front, which groups all partners in the coalition, Al Hayat said.

An estimated 3,000 Soviet experts are serving with Syria's 111,000-man army.

Meanwhile, the Israeli Cabinet on Sunday discussed Egypt's latest statement on nonalignment and peace negotiations, but officials in Jerusalem doubted it represented any major shift in policy.

Will Not Surrender

Mohamed Hassan el Zayyat, the Cairo's government's chief spokesman, said Saturday Egypt will not align itself with any major bloc, will not surrender to Israel and feels that to discuss peace while Israel holds Arab land taken in the 1967 war amounts to capitulation.

El Zayyat's remarks dampened the anticipation of some observers who expected a more conciliatory attitude from Egypt following President Anwar Sadat's expulsion last week of Soviet military advisers from Egypt.

Premier Golda Meir addresses the Knesset, Israeli's parliament, on Wednesday, and sources in Jerusalem speculated that once again she would call for peace talks without preconditions, such as an advance commitment by Israel to give up all occupied territory.

One Israeli newspaper, Haaretz, suggested that the government give "an expression of willingness in principle to recognize Sadat...as a partner for a political settlement."

But another paper, Maariv, said that "for the moment this is nothing but talk and a repetition of peace conditions that contradict Israel's vital interests."

The Israeli Cabinet also rejected the U.N. Security Council demand that it immediately release six Syrian and Lebanese officers captured in the June 21 raid in southern Lebanon. The cabinet countered by repeating a call for a general prisoner exchange with Egypt which holds 240 Israelis; Syria, which holds three, and Lebanon. Israel holds 711 Arab POWs.

Nixon, New Japanese Premier Agree to Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka has accepted an invitation for wide-ranging talks with President Nixon in Hawaii Aug. 31 and Sept. 1.

No agenda was announced for the meeting, which the official language of a joint Sunday night announcement billed as "an exchange of views" between the two Pacific allies.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said there will be a "full range of discussion of U.S.-Japanese relations, including trade."

The meeting will come less than two weeks after Nixon's expected nomination by his party to run for a second term.

For Tanaka, who was elected earlier this month, the meeting with Nixon will precede Japanese diplomatic talks with China and the Soviet Union.

"We feel it is an appropriate time to meet with the prime minister," said Ziegler in response to a question following the announcement.

The Hawaii gathering will be the second summit for the two powers this year. Nixon met in San Clemente, Calif., in January with Tanaka's predecessor, Eisaku Sato.

The January meeting was intended to soothe the feelings of the Japanese who were buffeted by the administration's announcements last summer of direct approaches to mainland China and of economic moves sharply affecting U.S. trading partners.

The adinistration last August imposed a 10-per-cent surcharge on imports without advising Japan, the United States' second-largest trading partner.

The new summit is seen in part as a continuation of the January effort to better relations that were ruffled by the moves of 1971.

Nixon will be accompanied by Secretary of State William P. Rogers and presidential national-security adviser Dr. Henry A. Kissinger.

Candidates for No. 2 Spot Exchange Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice presidential candidates are getting in some target practice in advance of the official beginning of the election campaign.

And the new chairman of the Democratic party says the party's financial position is much improved for the 1972 campaign, although they still haven't figured out how to pay all of the multi-million dollar debt left from the 1968 campaign.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, who was named Saturday by President Nixon as his running mate for November, criticized Democratic positions on amnesty, the draft and marijuana in a speech at Anchorage, Alaska Sunday.

He said voters will have a "clear choice" between candidates for the first time, adding, "It would be a tragedy if, after four years, the voters did not return Richard Nixon for another four years."

The Democratic vice presidential candidate, Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, went after Agnew in an appearance on ABC television's "Issues and Answers" program, saying the Vice President "gets right down into the grass-roots of a campaign, sometimes into the mud."

Welcome Debate

He said he would welcome a debate with Agnew.

Eagleton predicted that President Nixon would bring home all American ground troops from Vietnam by Election Day, although the war would still be an election issue.

He also indicated he has so far been rebuffed in attempts to meet with AFL-CIO President George Meany to try to win him to the Democratic side. But he held out the possibility that Meany still would take "a second look."

Agnew told 350 persons at a $100-a-ticket cocktail party in Anchorage that Democratic presidential candidate George S. McGovern proposes a "blanket amnesty" for draft evaders that dishonors Americans who have died in Vietnam.

On marijuana, he said that while Democrats "say they don't want to legalize marijuana, they on the other hand talk about regulation, which implies a kind of legalization."

Republican Complacency

He warned against Republican complacency over Nixon's lead in the polls over McGovern. "We must remember that only a few months ago he McGovern showed only 5 to 10 per cent in the polls and now he is the nominee of the other party."

Jean Westwood, new chairman of the Democratic National Committee, told newsmen in Custer, S.D. that the 19-hour Democratic telethon earlier this month netted only about $1.5 million instead of the $5 million that had been forecast.

Hanoi Getting Fuel Through New Pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon sources report that fresh supplies of motor fuel apparently have started flowing into North Vietnam through a new pipeline from South China.

In addition, U.S. reconnaissance planes recently located a new petroleum-storage depot tying into the pipeline. The depot is said to be relatively near the Chinese border, which might inhibit U.S. bombing attacks against it.

From Pingsiang, the new pipeline runs across the North Vietnamese border and reaches Haiduong, east of Hanoi.

U.S. minefields have stopped Soviet tankers from reaching North Vietnamese ports where they used to unload about 50,000 tons of motor fuel and oil monthly.

Chinese Pleased With Egyptian Ouster of Russians

EDITOR'S NOTE—Wes Gallagher, president of The Associated Press, is in China to negotiate an exchange of news and photos with Hsinhua, the Chinese news agency. He filed these notes Sunday.

By WES GALLAGHER

PEKING (AP) — Ousting of the Russian advisers from Egypt has been received with considerable satisfaction here, as showing what happens to those receiving Soviet aid because of Soviet "Socialist imperialism."

The Chinese recall their own experience when they refused to bow to Soviet demands: Russia withdrew the technicians and help it had sent to China.

In conversations the Chinese emphasize what they consider the key difference in aid they provide other nations and the way the Russians provided aid. They say China wants to encourage Socialist revolution but that each country must develop its own kind of this and be independent, not joining any bloc. The Soviets, in their eyes, provide aid only if it gives further Soviet control. They cite the Czechs in the Eastern Bloc as examples of the Soviet way.

China is a land of infinite contradictions and contrasts, defying generalizations or definitions—particularly by instant experts. Chinese officials repeatedly refer to this country as underdeveloped, but they concede there are basic differences between China and countries in other parts of Asia or in Africa.

China is far different, with a cultural history going back thousands of years, impressive universities, thousands of trained technicians, creative scientists, a massive disciplined work force.

American computer scientists from Yale and Carnegie-Mellon universities who are lecturing here say they have been surprised by Chinese advances in this field—that they are less than 18 months behind the United States in the most advanced computer theory and are rapidly closing this gap. They add that the Chinese are farther behind in programming, peripheral equipment and mass-manufacturing techniques, but they believe the Chinese could build a single computer to suit any needed purpose.

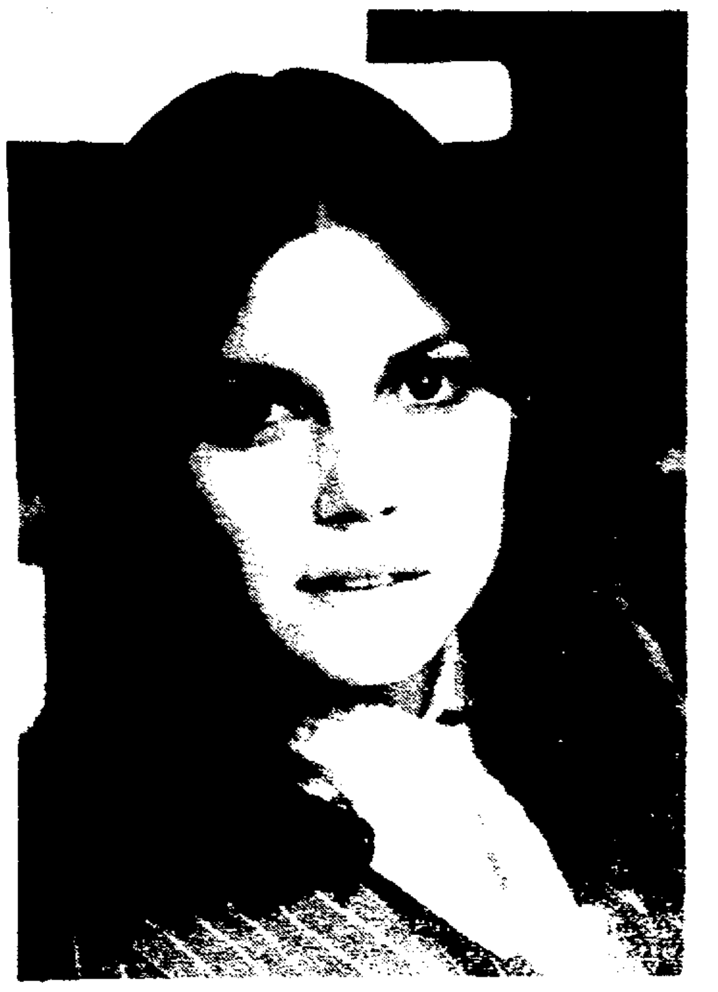

The Chinese airline is very safe because it does not fly in thunderstorms around Peking or en route. Our party, en route from Canton to Peking, was grounded overnight at Chengchou, the capital of Honan province, because of storms.

One passenger said that in three flights to Peking he had never reached this city without one grounding. This is apparently due to a lack of equip-

Lifestyles '72 Revealed in Hair Trends

'American Girl'

'U.S. Sophisticate'

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — The Official Hair Fashion Committee of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association recently introduced its American Hair Fashions for Fall-Winter 1972-73 at the national convention here.

The versatile collection of hairstyles is keyed to fall and winter fashions — updated versions of well-remembered classic looks.

What is the classic look? Think of all the best things you remember about the fashion you've known all your life and you have the classic look for '72.

The contemporary American woman has that combination of femme and freedom to wear Grandma's skirt lengths and father's shirts — together. Ms America 1972 wears her brother's jeans or yards of chiffon.

The American Girl

Whatever she goes by — Miss, Mrs., or Ms. — The 'American Girl' look is one of simplicity, freedom and comfort. Elegance is no accident. She carefully engineers just the right amount into every look she wears.

NHCA has engineered all four components — simplicity, freedom, comfort and elegance — into this long length style.

Remember barrettes, and the long, flowing elegance of a pageboy? Comb-held curlettes

'Contemporary Classic'

The Swinging Single

Lifestyle America 1972 is free, natural, up-to-date. Whether her habitat is campus or career, America's breed-'The Swinging Single' — looks for versatile fashion that suits her ever-changing scene.

Dual length styling makes NHCA's 'Swinging Single' one of the most versatile cuts in the fall - winter collection. Another long-hair fashion for the under-30 set, this cut features a softly layered length of curl, topped with close cropped bangs, tapered around the face and worn smooth from the crown in the small head look.

Pulled back, pinned up, or turned loose and free, this style swings with the shape born from a good professional haircut. A little more curl comes with a soft body perm with this natural look fashion ideal for the campus crowd or the young career woman.

Ms. America

'Ms. America' lives her own life in a simple, graceful style that is long, but off-the-shoulder. 'The Ms. America' takes the familiar pageboy line, but adds the enhancement of curls and waves about the face.

Remember the center part? You'll remember, too, all the tricks you can do with barrettes in all sizes, shapes and styles. Use them to pull forward a section of hair over each ear to give a fuller, bouncier style perfect for evening.

Contemporary Classic

A well-remembered look good today, especially when updated with the superstyling and professional cutting a stylist can provide, 'The Contemporary Classic' speaks softly.

There are lots of looks in this free-form fashion that range from the classic pageboy to a smoothie reminiscent of a bob. Quick service salon techniques can produce a soft wind-tossed curl. Remember the marcel wave? An electric curling iron and your stylist's know - how do the trick. Professional haircoloring could enhance natural highlights if desired.

U.S. Sophisticate

Another active American girl-on-the-go, the 'U.S. Sophisticate' dashes off to bridge club, a business meeting, a rally. When ever she goes, she'll get there with the right cut and care.

Brushed smooth and close to the head, the 'Sophisticate' is a carefree cap of a coif, right-on with short, short hairstyles coming up for fall.

A quick-change artist the 'U.S.S. Sopjhisticate,' with the extra effort of thermal curlers or the traditional salon set-and-dry, dresses up with a frong - curled fashion silhouette that is current. For a permanently curly look — the word is the answer — permanent curls, professionally engineered for the woman who will wear them.

Nine Showing Styles in Rome Not Italians

ROME (AP) — What's become of the Italians in Italian high fashions?

Couturiers showing their fall - winter collections last week in Rome included four Americans, a Russian, a German, a Turk, a Swiss and a Frenchman—nine out of the 22 who paraded their models.

It is not unusual in the world of fashions for nonnationals to try their luck in one of the capitals of haute couture. But in Italy, the foreign invasion has coincided with a decline of the Italian couturiers.

Faced by rising labor costs, the closing of small textile concerns and other repercussions of the country's generally unstable economy, their number has dwindled.

The closure over the last three years of almost 2,000 small mills, suppliers of fabrics, has forced some designers to drop out, perhaps temporarily, or to turn to ready to wear fashions.

Meanwhile, the foreigners, and Americans in particular, find a ready market in the United States where Italian fashions are taken up avidly. Models are bought up and mass produced for low price sale in little shops across the country.

Three of the non-Italian couturiers settled in Rome only a year ago. They are America's Frank Martieri, who appears to have heavy financial backing; Turkey's Bergin Usberk, and Germany's Patrizio. Germans are also enthusiastic buyers of Italian clothes.

Foreign designers apparently have less trouble in obtaining the no longer inexpensive but still highly prized Italian fabrics. Italian mills are believed to favor some of the non-Italian designers with quicker delivery. They hope sales abroad will step up broader exports of all Italian fabrics.

Wolf River Patrol Works for Boater Safety

BY MARK HANSMANN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEW LONDON — It was a slow day on the Wolf River for John Prinsen. As he guided his patrol boat toward Fremont, it was evident that the overcast sky was keeping river traffic to a minimum. On nicer days, he is kept quite busy.

Prinsen, route 3, New London, is one of two patrolmen hired by Waupaca County to patrol about 30 miles of the Wolf between New London and Fremont daily from April 1 to Sept. 30. They provide assistance to boaters in trouble, promote water safety and enforce regulations. He and Jerome Jorgenson, Fremont, work in cooperation with the state Department of Natural Resources.

The boat Prinsen uses was purchased and equipped by the Wolf River Preservation Association, a two-year-old organization comprised of representatives from the villages, cities and towns along the Wolf.

Help for Boaters

"We're out here to protect people, help them, and show them things they are doing that abuse the river," said Prinsen. The patrolmen have authority to issue citations, but often they let boaters off with a strong warning.

When Prinsen leaves on his patrol, he has no idea what situations he may encounter during the day. If river traffic is heavy, he may receive many calls to assist boaters in trouble, stop numerous boats to check for registrations and life preservers, pull debris from the water and issue citations for speeding where limits are posted.

The day this reporter made the trip, Prinsen's first call was to tow a boat with a malfuncioning motor to a New London marina. Prinsen often stops at marinas along the river to obtain information on where help may be needed. He also has a police radio on the boat to monitor calls for help and to call for assistance.

Friendly Attitude

"Courtesy pays in this job," Prinsen said. He waves a friendly hello to everyone he passes, and often stops and talks to fishermen and property owners along the river. Many of them have small gripes or problems they want to make known.

Watching the buoys that mark the deepest channels along the river, Prinsen found one that had drifted out of place and another that had been tipped over, probably from a large wake. As he righted it, he said, "For the minute it takes, you might be saving someone's life."

Prinsen, who is on 24-hour call, has received a few distress calls at night. "I do not like night traveling on this river," he said, "and I don't know why or how people do it — it just isn't safe. Nobody actually knows this river, because from one day to the next, a log or barrel could turn up anywhere."

Skiing Opposed

He also is opposed to water skiing on the Wolf. Skiers are required to remain "a safe distance" from other boaters and swimmers, but the river is not wide enough for that, Prinsen said. "There are a lot of people who just don't see the danger." He said there were a couple "close calls" near New London recently.

At Fremont, he pointed out, the problems that the village is having with its river use ordinance. Village officials passed an ordinance establishing a six-mile per hour speed limit on the river there for a one-year trial basis, to eliminate shore erosion caused by the wakes left by boats.

Many boaters are not obeying the speed limit, and Prinsen said a large number of the citations he writes are for that reason. He often tries to calm irate boaters by telling them "We don't make the ordinances, we're just out here to enforce them."

Despite the speed limit, boats pulling water skiers are permitted to travel 40 miles per hour in the same area. Prinsen said that doesn't make sense, and said he has a hard time explaining it to complaining boaters.

Littering a Problem

After turning back toward New London, Prinsen told of more problems he encounters. "We're tough on litterers," he said, "but they're hard to catch." The ones who are caught get citations automatically without warnings.

Boats are supposed to stay on one side of the river, as cars. But, Prinsen said, "many people don't know that and it can be dangerous going around a bend.

"There are people who don't like these patrol boats," Prinsen said. "They don't like the restrictions." But he said he has had a lot of fun on the river nearly all his life, and other people should continue to be able to use it. "Boat traffic is getting thicker every year, so you have to have some restrictions."

Aid for Boaters

"We're not out here primarily to issue citations," Prinsen said, adding the job is to aid boaters, and educate them to make the Wolf a safer place to be on the river.

Most people I meet on the river are very nice and polite, he said. "But if we have to give one a rough time, then it makes the other boaters."

A lot of people have the idea these patrol boats are just out on pleasure rides," said Prinsen. "But as soon as a boat breaks down or has trouble, then they would love to see us."

Airlines Sued By Family of Crash Victim

Air Wisconsin and North Central Both Named Defendants

An insurance carrier will take complete charge of Air Wisconsin's defense in a $2 million suit filed in Chicago Circuit Court by the family of a passenger killed June 29 when an Air Wisconsin plane and a North Central Airlines plane collided over Lake Winnebago.

Preston Wilbourne, Air Wisconsin general manager, said today that the Insurance Company of North America would take complete charge of the case for the Appleton airline. He said no blame has been established for the accident.

The suit was filed by Jean Cutler, 35, Fremont, Neb., widow of Joseph Cutler, 41, their daughter, Sally, 14 and son, Timothy, 17.

Cutler was aboard the Air Wisconsin plane flying from Sheboygan to Appleton when the collision occurred with the North Central Airlines plane headed for Oshkosh.

The two aircraft were destroyed and all passengers and crew members were killed.

Also named in the suit are North Central Airlines; Standard Kollsman Industries, Inc., a firm manufacturing aircraft instruments and Pacific Airmotive Corp., which built the North Central Convair plane.

The airlines were charged with negligence in operations. Today Wilbourne dismissed such charges saying in an action such as the Cutler suit some complaint must be filed but that no negligence has been proven. "There has not been anything established as yet (to prove the airlines were at fault)," he said.

The Pheasant Population in the Clintonville area is getting a boost from the high school chapter of the Future Farmers of America and the Woodland Badger 4-H Club. Both groups went to the Roger Nielson farm, route 1, Clintonville, to release eight-week old birds they raised from day-old chicks. The FFA members, top photo, released some of their birds in the farm yard while the 4-H club members went into surrounding fields to release theirs. The birds make a blur before the camera as they take wing.

Bigger Planes for Commuters

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) has ruled that commuter airlines may start using larger airplanes effective Sept. 17.

The new rule will permit use of aircraft with a 30-passenger and 7,500 pound payload capacity.

Present CAB rules limit commuters to airplanes with a gross takeoff weight of 12,500 pounds. This has generally meant a limitation of 15 to 20 passengers and a maximum payload of about 5,000 pounds.

The change is almost identical to what Air Wisconsin had submitted as its proposal to the CAB when hearings were held on the subject last February.

At the same time, the CAB decided against route certification for commuters, but left the door open for such certification in "individual circumstances where route security may be appropriate. . ."

No Stand

Air Wisconsin had not taken a stand for or against route certification.

There was, however, still some question on interpretation of the new weight limitation order. The CAB order read, in part, that the "new rule will require air taxi aircraft to meet both the 30-seat and 7,500 pound payload tests; that is, airplanes having either a seating capacity of more than 30 passengers or a payload capacity in excess of 7,500 pounds will not qualify under the revised exemption."

At the same time, the order indicated that until new aircraft are developed to meet the new rules that larger, existing airplanes would be permitted as long as they are restricted to 30 passengers and 7,500 pound payload.

Qualified Planes

An aviation publication indicated that piston and turboprop Convairs and F-27 Fairchilds "would qualify under the exemption if commuters can operate them economically with reduced payloads." Both planes normally seat 40 to 50 passengers.

The impact of the ruling upon Air Wisconsin is long-range, said Karl Baldwin, airline president. While noting that the ruling is "exactly what Air Wisconsin recommended" to the CAB, he added, "this does not mean, of course, that we are going into a purchase program of additional aircraft."

"But it gives us a chance in the long-run to plan on larger aircraft," he said, and added it also gives manufacturers incentive to produce aircraft in the newly authorized size range.

15-Seaters

Air Wisconsin at present flies Beech 99 and deHavilland Otter airplanes. Both are turboprops and both are used with 15 seats.

Baldwin noted that while there are no aircraft presently certified for use in the United States that fit the new weight category, the Russian-built Yak-40 jet has been used extensively in Europe for about five years, and there are indications it may soon receive U.S. certification.

It has a capacity of 35 passengers and a 7,500-pound payload, he said, and the Russians have priced it at slightly more than $1 million, well below what manufacturers in this country would have to charge, an apparent effort by the Soviets to gain a foothold in the world aircraft market.

Sugar Bush Girl, 5, Hit by Car, Dies

CLINTONVILLE — A 5-year-old Sugar Bush girl became Waupaca County's 11th traffic fatality of July, and the 15th for the year, when she was struck by a car in the village of Sugar Bush about 1:25 p.m. Sunday.

Rhonda R. Raddatz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Raddatz, route 2, New London, was pronounced dead on arrival at Clintonville Community Hospital.

According to Waupaca County Sheriff's authorities, the Raddatz girl ran in front of a car driven by George L. Fields, 65, route 3, New London, as Fields was traveling east on County Trunk WW about a quarter mile west of the U.S. 45 intersection.

The victim was transported to the hospital by the Clintonville volunteer rescue squad.

A 21-year-old Shawano man, Kenneth J. Kitzinger, was killed early Sunday morning when he was struck by an auto as he and a companion walked across County Trunk H five miles northeast of Shawano.

Kitzinger and David J. Daniel, 18, route 1, Shawano, were struck at 12:52 a.m. by a southbound car driven by John P. Mann Jr., 21, route 1, Shawano.

Daniel sustained a broken leg and head injuries. He was taken to Shawano Community Hospital and transferred to St. Vincent Hospital in Green Bay. Kitzinger was pronounced dead on arrival at Shawano Community. Mann was not injured.

Further details of the accident were not available. Shawano county officials are investigating.

Deaths of 10 other victims in weekend accidents raised Wisconsin's 1972 highway fatality toll to 595 today, compared with 540 on the same date last year.

Joseph Kobylinski, 52, and Edward Dornbrook, 35, of Milwaukee were killed Sunday night when they were struck by a car on a South Side street.

David L. Newfeld, 12, of Pure Grove, Ill., was killed Sunday when his motorcycle hit a roadside tree south of Lake Tomahawk, Oneida County.

Embarrass Proud of Its Funny Name

EMBARRASS (AP) — Residents of Embarrass say they aren't embarrassed about discussing how their East Central Wisconsin community got its name. But some try to avoid talking about it because they say it's just too complicated.

Postal clerk Ruby Rindt said the late Rev. Nicholas Diedrich of Clintonville determined the name came from the French word "embarrasser," meaning to impede, obstruct and entangle.

Some loggers called a stream passing through the community the Tangled River because pine logs floated down it to sawmills were obstructed in this area, the Catholic priest said. The French Canadians dubbed it the Riviere Embarrasse.

The townspeople eventually adopted the French version as the name of their village and the river.

"When people ask where we're from, usually we say Clintonville," Mrs. Rindt said. "It saves a lot of explanation."

Memories of Europe

Just Meeting People Was Tops

CLINTONVILLE — Meeting and conversing with people despite a language barrier, a cruise down the Rhine River and German beer were highlights of the recent European tour 14 Troop 288 Senior Girl Scouts will remember most.

While still in Europe, the girls each wrote a paragraph about the most memorable part of the tour.

"It's amazing how we all speak different languages but everyone understands a smile and a handshake," Brenda Anderson wrote.

"Smile of Understanding"

Five other girls echoed Brenda's feelings about their lesson in international relations.

"Even if we didn't say it perfectly, they were glad we tried," said Mary Harbath about the response of the German people to the girls' attempts to put their high school German into practice. "It really gives you a thrill to see that smile of understanding and appreciation, however feeble your attempts may be," said Vickie Kafka.

"We've learned that all people don't think alike or do things alike," said Terry Rill. "We must learn to tolerate others if we are to get along in this world."

Paula Sengstock and Diane Wicker agreed that meeting people was the most impressive part of the tour. They pointed up the helpful friendliness of the Europeans.

And meeting old friends was a delight, too. Barb Olk and Peggy Kersten enjoyed their visits with Barb's German pen pal and a former Clintonville High School American Field Service student from Italy.

"Part of Germany"

Scenery was something all will remember, particularly the cruise on the Rhine. "It was a fun way to feel part of Germany," said Debby Wiese of the boat tour.

The Swiss Alps were Lynne Krueger's favorite bit of scenery.

Getting the big, lumbering bus through tiny streets in older sections of some European cities impressed Ann McCarthy. "At one time we had about 10 Italians directing us and when we finally made it around the corner, they clapped and cheered," she wrote.

Denise Bessette and Jane Rundt enjoyed the German beer the most. "It is very good and not so strong," Denise said.

And Barb Schroeder liked sampling the different cuisines but came back to the United States with fondest memories of a Girl Scout concoction called munchies. They were made of chocolate, peanut butter and corn flakes.

Progressive GOP Congressmen Seek Delegate Selection Reform

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The Republican version of the McGovern Commission reforms, ignored by both public and party, may be saved from burial in an unmarked grave by eleventh-hour intervention of progressive Republican congressmen.

The proposed reforms, increasing the number of women and youth delegates to the 1976 convention, were to be quietly buried next month in the rules committee of the Republican National Committee. But Rep. Tom Railsback of Illinois, a respected young congressman, this week called an informal meeting of all GOP House members to try saving the reforms.

Railsback and other House Republicans fear the McGovern Commission reforms will preempt the new youth vote for the Democrats unless the Republicans also reform. Whether or not it is successful, their effort could produce a major floor fight at an otherwise somnolent Republican national convention in Miami Beach beginning Aug. 21 — incidentally reviving ideological factional disputes within the party which have been dormant since President Nixon's election.

Evans

The movement for Republican reform was begun by the 1968 convention when it authorized the Delegates and Organizations (DO) Committee (headed by Rosemary Ginn, Republican national committeewoman from Missouri).

Sidetrack Provisions

Nothing more than pious rhetoric was expected from the DO committee. Consequently, conservative Republican leaders were horrified when they glimpsed the preliminary DO draft during the Republican National Committee meeting in Denver a year ago. Clarke Reed, Mississippi's influential Republican state chairman, managed to sidetrack provisions that, in effect, established racial quotas for 1976 delegate selection.

But the remaining recommendations for 1976 are bad enough from the standpoint of Reed and his friends: A 50-50 split of delegates between men and women; a quota of youth delegates (under 25 years old) for each state equal to their voting strength in the state; each state naming a man, a woman, a youth and a "member of a minority ethnic group" to major committees of the national convention.

With the White House and Nixon's campaign apparatus uninterested, conservatives were confident the DO reforms would be interred by the National Committee's rules committee meeting in Miami Beach the week before the convention. The rules committee chairman, national committeeman William Cramer of Florida, is a conservative ex-congressman who is most unreceptive to Mrs. Ginn's innovations.

About a month ago, however, Railsback — apprehensive about a Democratic monopoly over youth — became interested in the DO reforms. So did Reps. John Anderson of Illinois (chairman of the House Republican Caucus) and John Dellenback of Oregon.

The upshot: A letter Tuesday from Railsback inviting all Republican congressmen to breakfast here Tuesday with Mrs. Ginn. He also invited Cramer, who declined but agreed to send an aide.

Selection Reforms

The letter shows that Railsback intends a congressional intervention to disrupt the National Committee's scenario: "I believe it would be appropriate, as Republican congressmen, to consider making a statement to the rules committee in August in support of delegate selection reforms designed to ensure that we remain, in President Nixon's words, 'the party of the open door'."

Moreover, Railsback would go beyond the DO committee by proposing racial guidelines. "There does not appear to be adequate emphasis on minority representation in the DO committee recommendations," he told us.

Railsback's attempted resurrection of the DO reforms poses a serious dilemma for Republicans such as Sen. William Brock of Tennessee. As a conservative, Brock is philosophically opposed to any quota system. But as chief youth organizer for the Nixon reelection committee, he does not want to give the Democrats an advantage.

Other conservatives find no such dilemma. "Hell, Rosemary Ginn was never for Nixon," one state chairman stormed to us. "She's a Rockefeller-Romney Republican." This recall of long-dead internal disputes suggests the impending debate over reform in Miami Beach is but a preview of the renewed struggle for the soul of the Republican party once Richard Nixon is gone.

Court Backs Prescription Advertising

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A Circuit Court judged ruled Friday advertising prescription drug prices is not an unethical practice, but suggested it might be unethical to try to impose sanctions against pharmacists who do such advertising.

Judge Richard W. Bardwell said he was "somewhat mystified" that the state Pharmacy Examining Board, a group of five pharmacists, should want to inhibit competition among drug stores by prohibiting such advertisng.

Bardwell's ruling upheld the right of Osco Drugs, Inc., which operates eight retail outlets in Wisconsin, to place price lists of the 100 most frequently prescribed drugs on its drug counters.

Osco has stores in Oshkosh and Green Bay.

The Pharmacy Examining Board took action to revoke the licenses of the eight store managers on gounds they had violated its administrative rule against unethical practices.

Bardwell said he couldn't see how the action could be construed as an unethical practice "unless the chief concern of the Wisconsin pharmacy board is to protect the interest of the pharmacists rather than the interest of the public."

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the public has been grossly overcharged for some prescription drugs," Bardwell said.

Firemen Free Man From Sofa's Grip

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — When firemen arrived at Thomas Burdelas' home, they found him trapped in his sofa.

It was a sofa-bed, actually, the kind that folds out into a bed and folds back up into a sofa. He was lying on it as a bed when it suddenly folded up into a sofa. Burdelas explained to the firemen Sunday, only his head showing.

One end latched but Burdelas' head and shoulders kept the other end of the sofa from latching.

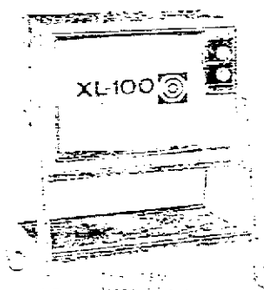

A friend who was with Burdelas was unable to free him and called the firemen. Burdelas, 18, wasn't hurt.

UW Expands Services For Adult Education

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Farmers, laborers and businessmen will be rubbing elbows and swapping stories while attending special short courses at the University of Wisconsin-Madison campus in coming years.

They will be houses in a converted dormitory here that is being developed into a special Adult Education Center that will serve as living and classroom space for workers, farmers and business executives brought back to the campus for special training programs.

Gov. Patrick J. Lucey has named three prominent leaders from the fields to serve as his representatives on a council created by the 1971 Legislature to oversee the new center. Lucey's representatives will join with two UW System officials and two lawmakers in serving on the administrative council of the Adult Education Center.

Appointed by Lucey were farm representative Gilbert Rohde of Chippewa Falls, head of the state Farmers Union; W. Harold Hastings, president of the Findorff Construction Company of Madison, business representative; and John Schmitt, president of the Wisconsin AFL-CIO.

UW Officials

Lawmakers serving on the council are State Sen. Walter G. Hallander, R-Rosendale, and State Rep. George Molinaro, D-Kenosha.

The center will serve as an operating headquarters for the UW's famed School for Workers, among other adult education programs.

Budgeted cost of the conversions of the dormitory — empty in the wake of student housing rules and preference changes on the Madison campus — is $675,000 under the law which authorized the creation and operation of the center.

Operating receipts of those adult educational programs housed in the center will help to repay the cost to the state for the dormitory and is conversion.

The School for Workers is operated for laborers and unions, and aims at giving workers modern concepts in labor-management relations. Other programs expected to use the facility include a farm group and bankers' programs operated during the summer months on the Madison campus.

Part of the Art of becoming a sister is having a call, but a great share of it is education and experience. Ten junior sisters of the Franciscan Sisters of Christian Charity Manitowoc, are getting that experience this summer at St. Therese Catholic Church and School in Appleton. Under the guidance of Sister Paulyn Vanden Hogen, principal; Sister Lyra Putzer, and Sister Annellus Lotter, all professed sisters, the 10 are learning the ropes of teaching as well as community living. UWO Graduates Finding School, Work Positions

OSHKOSH — Of the 559 December 1971 graduates of the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 286 reported having either found employment or having plans for graduate school in response to a UWO placement office survey. 102, or 18 per cent, did not answer the survey.

Of the rest. 160 reported that they were still looking for jobs Five graduates had entered the military, and six were unemployed but not presently seeking jobs

Most of those who reported having made their post-graduate plans have found employment. Only 5 per cent of the class reported having entered graduate school.

Placement Office Director Richard J Turzenski called attention to the changing life styles for graduates wherein an increasing number of students do not immediately after graduation sek employment or complete other post-graduation plans. Instead, they elect to travel or engage in activities other than employment, graduate school or the military.

Breaking down the survey according to their school, he noted that two-thirds of the School of Business Administration graduates, 46 out of 69, had accepted employment while two were going to graduate school and 13 still wre seeking employment at the time of the survey. Eight had not responded.

Among the 254 School of Education graduates, 122 (48 per cent) had accepted jobs. seven (2 per cent) had entered graduate school. three each (1.5 per cent) had entered the military or were not seeking jobs, 90 (36 per cent) still were seeking employment and 29 (11 per cent) had not responded

School of Letters and Science graduates, of which there were 236, had 90 (38 per cent) employed, 19 (8 per cent) in graduate school. 57 (24 per cent) still seeking employment, and 65 (28 per cent) not responding Two had entered the military and three were not seeking employment.

Meat Cutters Local Endorses McGovern

The business representative for the Fox Valley AFL-CIO meat cutters affiliate said it was "inconceivable" that AFL-CIO head George M. Meany would want to "sit this one out," after Local 73, Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Tannery Workers, voted unanimously here Thursday to support the McGovern-Eagleton ticket in November

After spending untold millions of dollars on voter registration, it is inconceivable that the leader of the House of Labor would 'sit this one out,'' said Gordon Loehr of Fond du Lac, the union's business representative

Local 73 represents about 2,200 meat cutters and wrappers from Milwaukee to Marinette.

Loehr, in a news release from union headquarters in Fond du Lac, said "the cloak of secrecy and vindictiveness is unhealthy in any president, whether he presides over the U S A or AFL-CIO "

Last week, the AFL-CIO executive council voted nearly unanimously to stay neutral in the 1972 presidential race, after union head Meany said he couldn't support either Democratic standard bearer Sen George McGovern or incumbent Republican President Richard Nixon.

The move was seen as a setback to the McGovern candidacy, because organized labor has traditionally sided with the democratic candidate. However, the executive council's decision will not bind local unions and affiliates. and many are expected to come out with their own endorsements.

Local 73 had a 'spirited give-and-take session" Thursday Loehr said, that 'dealt with the issues as they relate to members of local 73 and their families. unequitable tax system, record unemployment, unfair wage controls and the Southeast Asian tragedy "

Loehr serves on the Fond du Lac City Council, and has been active in local Democratic party politics.

The union met in Appleton Thursday.

Oshkosh Woman Hit in Sunday Night Break-in

OSHKOSH — An unidentified intruder entered the unlocked apartment of Mrs Roy Baumann, knocked her unconscious when she awoke, and stole a small amount of cash Sunday night

Mrs Baumann, of 639 Greenwood Court, told officers that she was sleeping on a couch in the living room of her second floor apartment with the front door to the hall open She said that her husband child were sleeping in a bedroom and some guests were swimming in an outside pool

She said that she didn t know how long she had been asleep but was awakened by a noise she thought to be her husband. She said she turned her head to talk to him and was struck by something The blow knocked her unconscious

Mrs Baumann was discovered on the couch by Gary Baumann who had been swimming

He told officers that he came inside from the pool and on the way to the upstairs apartment he found his trousers on the top of the outside stairs. He said that $26 was missing from a wallet

When he arrived in the apartment he found the floor fan that had been in the door tipped over and Mrs Baumann unconscious

Mrs Baumann told officers that she did not get a look at the intruder's face and saw only that he was wearing dirty deck shoes.

A purse that had been lying on the floor had been rummaged through but nothing was taken.

Better Trash Cans Needed, Panel Says

Sutherland Receives Report on College, Wisconsin Containers

College Avenue and other Appleton locations need better waste containers. a special committee has advised Mayor James Sutherland.

The committee is awaiting information from Northside Businessmen's Association and other cities before submitting a recommendation on an offer by a private firm to donate free-standing containers to the city

Special Services, Inc , of Lebanon. Mo , would provide the containers and sell advertising on them to local merchants The city would own the containers after two years

The mayor has sent the committee a ruling it requested from City Atty David Geenen, in which he gave the opinion that the advertising would be a minor encroachment" on public right-of-way if the containers are placed on sidewalks. and would therefore be permissible under the law

The committee agreed that the present containers. attached to street light poles along the avenue. are too small and should be replaced by free-standing units such as those offered by the firm, unless they could supplement the larger units in some areas.

The committee recommended placing free-standing containers on both sides of College from Richmond to Drew Street and on both sides of Wisconsin Avenue from Meade to Richmond

Colors would be chosen later based on reaction from merchants and city officials The committee also recommended being given authority to review all advertising to be placed on the containers

The committee advised having the city attorney review the contract that would go with the containers

Besides asking north side merchants for additional information on the committee intends to contact officials in cities currently under contract with the Missouri firm

Experiment at DePauw University

'Dropouts' Succeed in College

GREENCASTLE, Ind. (AP) — Fourteen high school sudents were slipped into DePauw University last fall in a pilot experiment and appear to have outperformed the regular students

The 14 who were high school juniors had a combined first-semester grade average of 2 91 a few points better than the all-student average of 2 84. according to first results.

Indentity of the carefully selected students was kept a secret by Admissions Director Louis J Fontaine for fear it might attach some stigma for not having a high school diploma

There was some basis for the fear One student was labeled a dropout by her high school board which later relented and presented her a diploma after she earned a 3 0. or 'B" average the first semester in college

The DePauw experiment coincides with a recommendation of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education that the senior year of high school and the freshman year of college be integrated

Clark Kerr. chairman of the commission. has commented that the final year of high school is largely wasted and could be used to enable students to earn a bachelor s degree in three years

The 14 DePauw students established these marks all earned at least a C (2 0 average the first semester. eight earned a B (3 0) average. one student had an A (4 0) for both semester

Mr. Sager reported for the Building Grounds, and Property Committee that the draft of the new Five-Year Plan is presently at the City Planner's office.

The Chairman of the Educational Television Evaluation Committee, Jim Denil, reported on the results of the committee investigation and evaluations. Following much discussion, Mr. Heid moved that the report of the E.T.E.C. be accepted and the administration be instructed to put $25,200.00 in the proposed 1973 budget for the purpose of purchasing and installing television receivers and distribution systems at the elementary level. Second by Mrs. Danford and carried on roll call vote.

There was no new business.

Old Business:

Mr. Boettcher submitted more facts on the McKinley-Foster boundary shift. A motion was made by Mrs. Danford to accept the second alternative as recommended to the Board, in lieu of the May 22 Board action. This would be to offer an option for pupils in the area bounded by Jefferson and Jackson, Harding and Hoover, to attend either Foster or McKinley in 1972-73, with the understanding that all pupils in the area bounded by Jackson and Oneida, Harding and Hoover attend Foster in 1973-74. Second by Mr. McKenzie and carried.

Mrs. Danford recommended that the city be notified of this action so that they may give consideration to sidewalks in certain areas.

Mr. McKenzie moved that the Board commend and thank Mrs. McClanahan for her many invaluable contributions to Joint School District No. 10 over the past three years, and for her deep concern for a relevant educational program, as well as its' cost to the community. Second by Mr. Becker and carried.

Mrs. McClanahan moved to adjourn. Second by Mr. Becker and carried.

The New Japanese Premier

The new Premier of Japan, Kakuel Tanaka, is spending most of his many-houred working days pulling together the domestic pieces in his country. In spite of former Premier Einu Sato's general competence, like most men, he had some areas of weakness and a new look always means changes.

Specifically Sato had been accused of ignoring the pleas and then the demands of labor. To ease the tense situation, Tanaka has met with the leaders of the Sohyo, the labor federation, and has conferences with more minor officials scheduled in the future. Since Tanaka does not bask in an overwhelming political majority, he has made overtures not only to his major rival for the post, Takeo Fukuda, and his particular part of the split Liberal-Democratic party, but with heads of such oppositions as the Socialist, Communist, Komei and Social-Democratic parties.

In spite of what the visitor, awed by efficiency and punctuality, may think, Japan has a massive transportation problem. Its thousands of urban commuters still are packed literally by hand into the train coaches and its highway building has not been able to keep up with the tremendous increase in personal automobiles. Japan has not yet reached the Philippines limitation on cars in overcrowded cities but Tanaka has managed to settle a nation-wide shipping strike which happened because of faulty transportation. He has further made inroads in the problems of housing which have reached the desperate stage, pollution and the interference of a typhoon.

With all these immediate areas to deal with at home, it is not strange that Tanaka has not made much of an impact toward any changes in Japanese international relations. Actually there are signs of at least what will be the direction of his future policies. Toward the United States he has been correct, perhaps not as warm as was Mr. Sato but there have been no controversies or crises. Premier Tanaka has appointed a member of the Socialist party to make wider contacts with China. Somewhat surprisingly, Tanaka has indicated at the annual trade talks with the United States now being held in Japan that he is aware of the overwhelming favorable balance of trade and is seeking means to flatten it out. This means a change in attitude toward pushing Japanese products in foreign markets while retaining high tariffs at home. It certainly will make a difference in Japanese-American relations if it influences such items as textiles and electronic equipment.

There are deeper problems between Japan and other nations that a new premier will not ease in a few weeks. Encouraging, however, is the general atmosphere of reason, common sense and the lack of passion-arousing rhetoric.

Chess Becomes Important

Americans may be embarrassed at Bobby Fischer's bad manners or his emulation of some pro sports figures in this country. His demands for a bigger piece of the take, refusals to play because of television cameras and complaints that his chair wasn't comfortable are hardly the makings of an all-American hero.

But no one can tot up what Fischer and his Icelandic saga have done for chess. The outcomes and even the progress of the matches are on the front pages. Some newspapers run a play by play account which is baffling to most readers whose familiarity with chess is limited to the names of some of the chessmen and the checker-like look of the playing board.

Chess clubs have found themselves in the news and on television. One player likened the sport to compulsions like gambling and alcoholism. The sales of chess sets are booming.

And any minute now the ads will come out. There will be dress material printed in chessboard checks. Pillows with bishops or pawns or knights will replace those with pandas. Children's sand toys will have queens' or kings' heads. Rings, tie pins and earrings will reflect the contest.

Actually, while Fischer and Spassky have made the sport renowned, they've not really worked at this marketing bit. They should wear special clothes, eat special foods, take up specialties in their spare time like needlepointing or turning handsprings or acrostics.

Maybe in spite of all the nonsense, they really are in Iceland just to play chess.

A Tour on Tax Dollars!

The Office of Economic Opportunity sponsors programs that "broaden the identity" of underprivileged children and can help them better to understand the world. Under such a wide term the Monmouth County, New Jersey, Action Program sent 67 teenagers on a tour of Europe and Africa during July and August.

Obviously the tour could come under such a broad definition of the purpose of the use of antipoverty funds. Obviously, too, somebody or maybe a group of somebodies had no conception of reasonable expenditures of such funds. It seems that $60,000 would have to be returned to the federal agency if not spent in Monmouth. So a plan was worked out, not to ease the burdens of poverty, but to account for the money.

Maybe in this era of relatively easy travel, sending kids on a foreign tour is no great news. But we have a hunch the hard pressed taxpayers feel differently. Of 401 replies by a newspaper about the tour, the answers were 400-1 against the "wise use of your tax dollar."

Maybe the planners were dedicated people. But they lacked common sense.

The Busy Dairyman

Our neighbors on the dairy farms have been energetically busy, as some impressive statistics from governmental sources remind us.

The milk production of Wisconsin farms during May rose three per cent from the same period a year ago, and output per milking cow rose to a new high record of 1,025 pounds. Thus May matched the performance of the farmers and their herds during the first four months of the year which also showed output gains of about three per cent. The milk produced here in May was the highest monthly volume in seven years, reflecting not only a better performance per animal but another increase in the size of the milking herd. The 1,875,000 milk cows in May represented the largest total herd since the autumn of 1968.

Wisconsin trends contrasted impressively with the national dairy picture which showed a yield gain of only one per cent for May, while the number of milk cows in the country was declining slightly.

It was estimated that 100,000 persons saw the 29th annual convention parade Sunday of the Wisconsin Department of the American Legion in Appleton. The weather threatened twice with sprinklings of rain, but the sun was shining during most of the two-hour and 43-minute parade.

Hildegarde, radio personality and songstress, was one of the performers at the Wisconsin American Legion convention. The singer was entertained informally at the home of her Appleton cousin, Mrs. Al Utschig. Her mother, Mrs. Ida Sell, Milwaukee, and her sisters, Mrs. Beatrice Zummach, Muskego Lake, and Mrs. Germaine Harting, Houston, Tex., also were guests. Born in Adell, Wisconsin, Hildegarde spent her childhood in New Holstein.

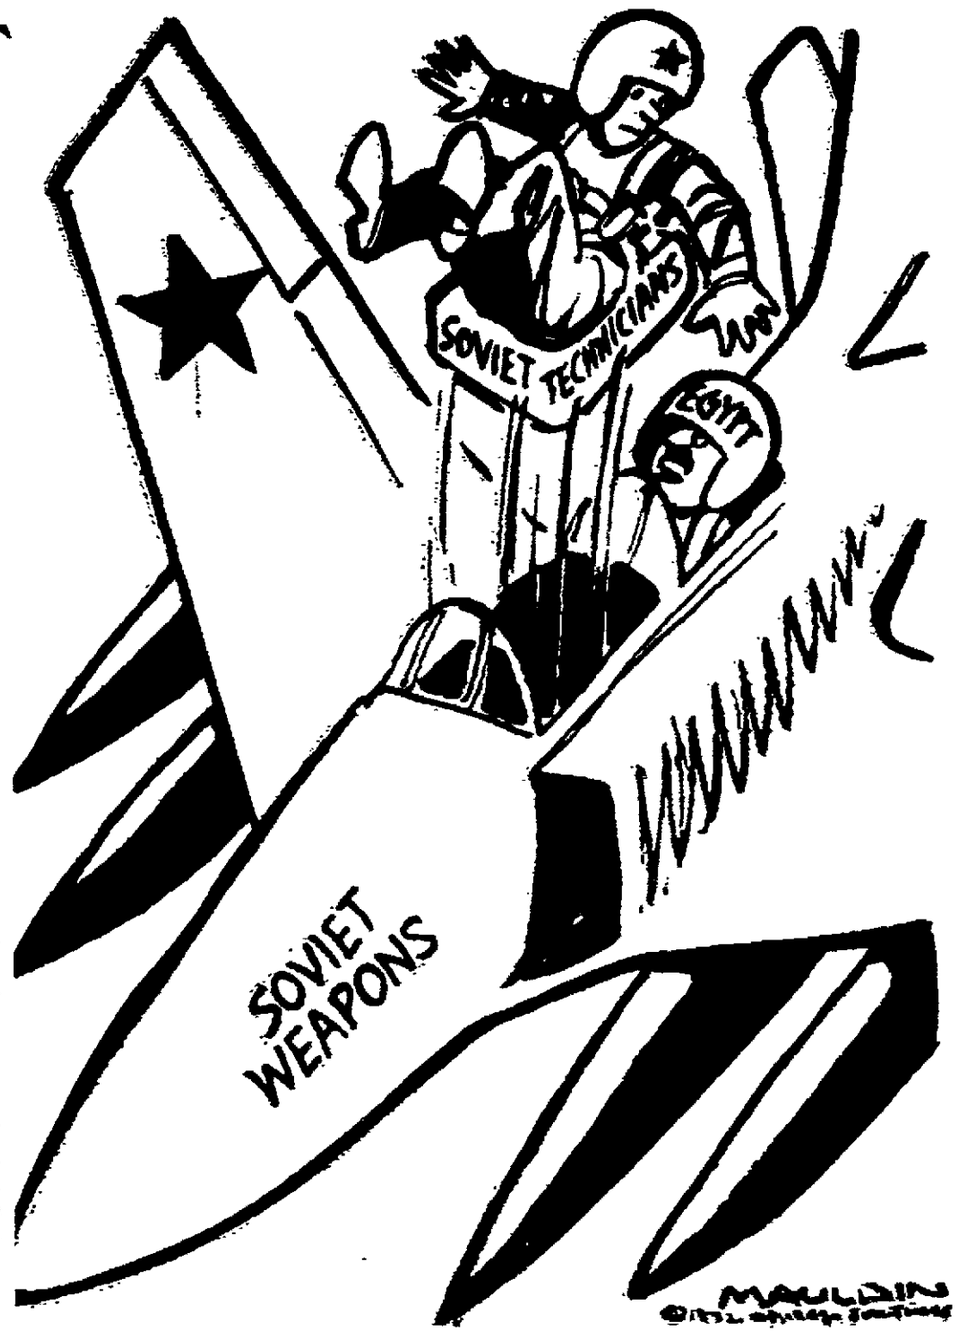

Miss Barbara Schultz, Shawano, governor of Badger Girls State and delegate to Girls Nation in Washington, D.C., was the guest singer at the state American Legion Auxiliary banquet the previous evening.

Ervin Van Dyke, Little Chute was one of the newly elected four vice commanders for the Wisconsin American Legion. The state convention was in Oshkosh.

Mrs. Allen Gunderson, Shiocton, was elected president of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Wisconsin. Mrs. Edward Arndt, Appleton, was elected department chaplain, and Oshkosh member, Mrs. William Kileen, was named a vice president.

North Vietnamese Not Betting McGovern Will Defeat Nixon

BY JOSEPH KRAFT

HANOI – The smart money in Las Vegas is not quoting heavier odds against George McGovern's election as president than the Communist leadership here in Hanoi, and that fact says something important about the way North Vietnam approaches American public opinion and internal politics.

The North Vietnamese do not act, in an aggressive fashion, to score big gains in the United States. On the contrary, they act on American opinion defensively, in order to minimize their own losses.

One sure sign is the attitude here towards the presidential election. Every North Vietnamese I have questioned on the subject agrees with the judgment of Mai Van Bo, a high-ranking diplomat in the foreign office, that "McGovern has only a slight chance to win."

Not Betting on McGovern

It is plain wrong to suppose that the North Vietnamese leaders are pinning their hopes on the senator from South Dakota. Their hopes rest on the perception that it would be a great coup for President Nixon if he could achieve a settlement of the war.

As Le Duc Tho, the politburo member who serves as chief Communist negotiator at the Paris peace talks, said in an interview here the other day: "If Nixon makes a peaceful settlement, he will surely be reelected."

Since they are not stupid, the North Vietnamese are bound to make what they can out of the President's superkeen interest in reaching a settlement. If only to secure some easing of American military pressure, they are sure to come forward with some noises that sound peaceful. Indeed, I am inclined to believe that Le Duc Tho has bone to Paris this time chiefly to try to secure the end of the present bombing and the lifting of the blockade.

A similarly defensive outlook governs the North Vietnamese attitude on another current cause celebre – the bombing of the dikes. The dikes comprise a highly integrated hydraulic system for the most productive part of North Vietnam.

The Matter of the Dikes

If the American Air Force, which lives by routine, were truly going after the dikes, it would do so in a methodical, not a harum-scarum, way. I have to conclude from what I have seen that there is no deliberate American drive to bomb the dikes.

But the dikes do run parallel to many roads. Some are close to railroad tracks and bridges. The dikes also make ideal sites for the surface-to-air, or SAM, missiles about which American pilots have such a thing.

Given the probable errors in American bombing, which are not small judging by my experience here, a major effort is bound to hit some dikes. Without really wanting to, the United States is plainly bombing the dikes, and if the bombing continues there could well be serious floods as a result.

Not surprisingly, the North Vietnamese have raised a howl of protest. Their obvious hope is to stir the conscience of the world, and particularly of the American people, so as to moderate, or halt, the bombing which does, in fact, hold out the menace of catastrophe.

In much the same vein, there is the way the North Vietnamese have handled another hot issue – the issue of the prisoners. Up to 1970, Hanoi seems not to have paid the prisoner question any special attention. That is apparently one of the reasons information about the prisoners is so poor.

In 1970, President Nixon and some of his followers began stressing the prisoner issue. Their aim, one North Vietnamese official said to me, "was to win sympathy for the war. But the prisoners turned out to be a two-edged sword."

Once the prisoners were at the center of attention, the North Vietnamese, not surprisingly, began using them against the President. Public statements by various prisoners have become increasingly frequent, and an interview with them is now a standard feature of every visit by an American.

I saw two captured pilots – Edward Elias, who was shot down in April of this year, and Eugene Wilbur who went down in 1968. In my own mind I was hung up between sympathy for their plight and harsher feelings for the laxity which caused them to go beyond the rule of giving name, rank and serial number and nothing more to enemy captors.

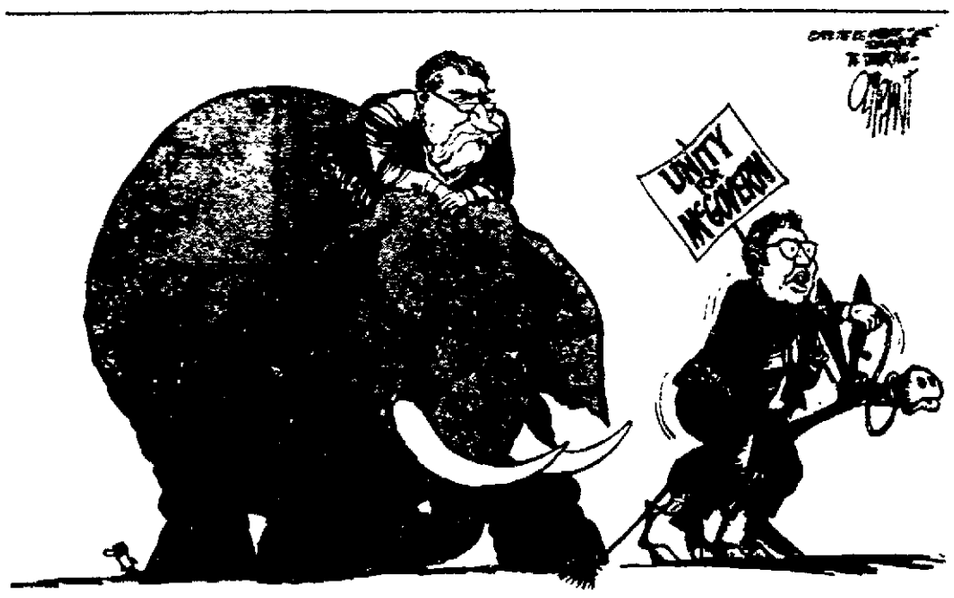

Confident of Release

But there is no doubt about what the prisoners were saying. They were saying that the United States should get out of the war post-haste and on any conditions. They were saying with utter confidence, which I share, that once the war is over they would be released.

What all this means is that North Vietnam should not hold any terror for Americans. It is a desperately poor country which might, with 20 years of steady prosperity, surge forward to the level of, say, Portugal. Far from being able to humiliate the United States, or render it a "pitiful, helpless giant," the North Vietnamese are limited to the use in their own self-defense of a few feeble weapons thrown up by circumstances.

To think that this country can do the United States harm is a form of paranoia. The United States can be degraded in Vietnam only by Americans.

Wisconsin Report

State Democratic Leaders Foresaw Change in Party

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON – The story has been told that when Gov. Lucey chatted with Gov. Gilligan of Ohio at a national conference of governors some months ago, the Wisconsin leader expounded about the anti-establishment motivation of the forces that were then at work to take over the Democratic party apparatus of the country and made good their attempt with the presidential nomination of Sen. MGovern more recently.

The Ohio governor remonstrated, according to the story, explaining that the "establishment" consists of politicians such as himself and the Wisconsin governor and others who now hold high office and control their party's provincial branches.

Lucey's response, if any, was not recorded. But he might have replied that the Wisconsin establishment including notably himself had already joined the anti-establishmentarians. As Mr. Lincoln remarked a long time ago, sometimes the leader must accelerate his pace to avoid being run over by the followers.

State Support

In the Wisconsin presidential primary campaign of Sen. McGovern, which now must be acknowledged as the decisive point in the astonishing progress of the South Dakota senator who until then had been one of the more obscure figures on the national stage, Senators Proxmire and Nelson declared for him.

Gov. Lucey maintained a public stance of neutrality, which appeared at the time to be validated by the dispersal of close friends and associates into several rival camps. Yet as the time for the decision on April 4 neared, he found it difficult to maintain his chosen role. Immediately before the count it became obvious that he believed McGovern was winning here and that the prospect did not displease him in the slightest. The haste with which he volunteered his services immediately thereafter told the story.

Why Their Backing?

Why did the three major figures in the ruling party of Wisconsin, in such contrast to the panjandrums in the party structures of other states such as Illinois or Michigan or Iowa or wherever, provide such eager encouragement to the long shot aspirations of a prairie politician who by any normal assessment had no more claim than themselves? These men are also conscious careerists in an uncertain profession.

In retrospect, they did not altogether abandon the pragmatic rules by which they have lived. These men have consciously represented the leftward drift in their party, as distinguished by the centrists such as Muskie and even Humphrey. They saw more clearly than did many lesser politicians in Wisconsin that the McGovern forces would probably take over the apparatus, whatever the decision of the national electorate in the fall.

Wisconsin has always had a comparatively weak party system, in structureal terms. Zealous youth legions somehow recruited for prosaic George McGovern would be enormously useful hereabouts later, whatever fortune might decree in the fall.

Youth Vote

If the political armies of the young remain in harness, they may remember with gratitude the encouragement of these men who are reasonably young by traditional measure, but are a generation and a half senior to the evangelical youth who won the party for McGovern.

The great imponderable this year is the distribution of millions of votes cast by the newly enfranchised 18 to 20-year-olds – more than half a million of them in Wisconsin.

Lucey emphasizes the point again and again, disclosing his fascination with the subject. He and his party can afford to lose the election among more senior voters – he says with a frequency that suggests he may be reconciled to the idea – and yet win with a 70 per cent support of those who always before were disqualified.

Strictly Personal

We No Longer Are Pilots of Our Future

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

At a meeting of the World Future Society last year, W. D. Rowe of the Mitre Corp. made the point that "We don't live in a surprise-free environment." He illustrated his point this way:

Suppose everybody in the room were polled on where they would be in 10 minutes. One man answers, "We'll all be dead." Since that answer is a minority of one, it would be eliminated from further consideration.

"But that's the guy who's got the bomb in his suitcase," said Mr. Rowe, "and he's the guy I'm looking for."

One reason the old things don't work so well now is that society used to be fairly surprise - free. Maybe something important changed every decade; more likely, it took a century. Now, in a year, or a few months, we are subjected to the surprise of novelty, and are forced to look at familiar situations from a strange new perspective.

Who, a half-dozen years ago, could have projected the epidemic of skyjackings that have altered the whole pattern of commercial flight? Technological advances have made society more powerful and effective, on the one hand, but on the other have made it easier for one man, or a few, to disrupt the lives of thousands or millions.

Surprises happen weekly, daily, almost hourly. "Future shock" – that is, the shock of having the future sneak up on us too fast – is more than a journalistic phrase; it is a palpitating fact all around us. None of us is prepared to die in the next 10 minutes, yet all of us know that if the wrong finger presses the wrong button, it can happen today.

Is there any rational way to anticipate the future, and thus soften or deflect its impact? Only a few people are thinking about this; the rest are pursuing the same old tired politics, the same entrepreneurial game, the same struggle for "power" and "security" – when both those words have become virtually meaningless under the stress of surprise.

For one thing, our whole socio-economic system is not yet geared to have enough "lead time" to solve a problem even after it is perceived. One common example is that if all DDT production were stopped immediately, the insecticide would continue to flow into the seas and the level of poison in marine animals would continue to rise for the next decade.

As technology continues relentlessly to introduce new variations into our lives, each "advance" poses a whole new set of problems for which we are not prepared, socially, economically, politically, or morally. We are no longer piloting this global spaceship; it is piloting us, willy-nilly, without any "back-up system" for a safe landing.

Daley Still Wants to Sit

BY ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — The toughest job Sen. Tom Eagleton, the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, had after his nomination, was to try to persuade Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago to work for McGovern this year.

The meeting between the two men took place late Saturday night in Mayor Daley's office. Eagleton spoke first:

"Dick, we sure missed you last week in Miami. Everyone said it just didn't seem like a Democratic National Convention without Richard Daley."

"I didn't come because I didn't have a seat."

"We suddenly realized that midway in the convention, and I want you to know it was a terrible oversight. As a matter of fact, we had a box seat set aside for you right next to the podium."

"I didn't have a seat with the Illinois delegation."

Lousy Seats

"The Illinois delegation had lousy seats. You wouldn't have seen anything from there."

"I was elected as a delegate and they wouldn't seat me."

"Yes, that was brought to our attention. There was some question about the new reform rules, Dick. We wanted to seat you in the worst way, but we had no control over it. It was an open convention, and the delegates were tired and hot They probably didn't even know what they were voting on."

"They knew what they were voting on. They were voting to take away my seat."

"I want to assure you, Dick, that Sen. George McGovern wanted you seated. I'll never forget the final morning of the convention, at 3:30 a.m., when all of us stood holding our hands high to show that the party was united. George said to me, 'My cup would runneth over if Dick Daley was here to share this moment with me.' "

"He didn't say that."

Something Like That

"He said something like it. There was so much noise I didn't hear his exact words. Look, Dick, the important thing is to beat Richard Nixon in November. We can't do it without winning Illinois. And we can't win Illinois without you."

"You should have thought about that when you took away my seat."

"It was hot and muggy and rained a lot in Miami. You would have hated it. Frankly you were much better off watching the convention on television."

"I know one thing: If they had held the convention in Chicago like I wanted them to, no one would have taken away my seat."

"That's exactly what I told George. I said, 'If the Democratic convention had been held in Chicago, we wouldn't have had a Dick Daley problem.' "

Knows What to Do

"I know how to take care of people who take away other people's seats."

"We know you do, Dick, and that's why we need you in November."

"Anyone who sat in my chair would have got his head cracked open."

"Now this is what we plan to do. We'd like to make you chairman of the McGovern drive in Illinois. You run it any way you want to."

"If they had tried to take my seat away from me in Chicago, they would have gotten a snootful of tear gas."

"Dick, forget the past. We have to think ahead. We need a Democrat in the White House. George isn't asking, he's begging."

"Anyone touches my chair in Chicago gets his car towed away."

"But what's your answer, Dick?"

"Tell him I'm going to sit on it."

Economic Stabilization Questions and Answers

Internal Revenue Service

This column of questions and answers on the President's Economic Stabilization Program is provided by the local office of the U. S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service. The column answers questions most frequently asked about wages and prices.

Q. Are landlords still subject to Phase II rent regulations even though small businesses have been exempted from controls?

A. Yes. Although the Cost of Living Council has lifted controls from firms with 60 or fewer employes, except for businesses in the health service and construction industries, this small business exemption has no application to residential rent transactions.

Q. In computing the average number of employes for determining whether the small business exemption applies, are part-time and casual employes counted as employes?

A. Yes. Every employe is treated as if he were a full-time employe for purposes of this computation.

Q How does the small business exemption affect master employment contracts negotiated on an industry basis?

A. Prices and wages remain under direct control in all small businesses where more than 50 per cent of the employes are affected by a master employment contract covering more than 60 workers. In small businesses and small governments where less than 50 per cent of the employes are covered by a master contract or jointly-negotiated contract involving over 60 workers, only the wages of the employes covered by the master contract or jointly-negotiated contract remain subject to controls. Wages of small firm employes who are covered by contracts involving 60 or fewer workers will be exempted from direct controls.

Q If after Pay Board disallowance of a wage increase, the parties leave a provision in their collective bargaining agreement which states that any disallowed increase shall be paid when controls are lifted or relaxed, have they violated Economic Stabilization regulations?

A. Yes. It is a violation to fail or refuse to comply with a decision of the Pay Board. Leaving a provision in an agreement which calls for the payment of a wage and salary increase disallowed by the Board constitutes such a refusal.

Q If an employer establishes, either through negotiations or independently, an escrow account into which it will pay an amount equivalent to wages and salaries disallowed, is the amount "wages and salaries" under Stabilization regulations?

A. Yes. Since this escrow arrangement is, in effect, a form of deferred compensation, it would constitute "wages and salaries" for services performed currently. If an amount in excess of that allowed is payable to the escrow account and if the account continues to be maintained for the purpose of setting aside this excess, this arrangement violates Stabilization regulations.

Q. Does IRS have the power to subpoena a business's books and records in connection with the enforcement of the Economic Stabilization program?

A Yes The recently amended Economic Stabilization Act of 1970 and subsequent delegation orders issued under the Act give the IRS the power to sign and issue subpoenas for the production of relevant books, papers and other documents in connection with the stabilization program. If an individual refuses to obey such a subpoena, the IRS may ask the Justice Department to seek the aid of the U.S. District Courts to compel the individual to appear and produce the documents.

Sellers Find Best Profits In Selectivity

Businesses Learn Suppliers Don' Even Want to Submit Bids

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of industrial purchasing agents suggests there is something distinctly odd about the current business expansion: companies aren't eagerly accepting all orders

Some of the 100 agents who responded to queries suggest that many sellers are even avoiding orders. And making the situation even more peculiar, they are doing so allegedly in order to remain profitable.

Various explanations were offered for the seeming disinterest on the part of sellers, but the most common theme seemed to be that if you're going to be profitable today you must be selective.

Some respondents mentioned that Phase II controls might be dampening the enthusiasm of companies that once would respond to a request to bid as eagerly and randomly as a hungry fish lunges for bait.

The agents were contacted in all parts of the country by "Purchasing World" magazine, whose editor claims that the old front office reminder, "don't forget to ask for the order," is passe in some companies.

2 Quotations

One purchasing department reported that it requested quotations from 35 suppliers and received only two bids. When the two bids were examined they were found to be so unrealistic they had to be ignored.

"It is becoming increasingly difficult to get quotations," said Jack O'Connor, the editor. "Throughout the country there is a marked drop in the number of bids on potential new business."

Reflecting on the situation, which is to be described in the upcoming issue, O'Connor commented:

"It's a strange place for silence. If a dealer won't quote the price, how can you begin serious talks? They're purposely passing up the business. The bid is the starting point and they're not bidding."

A common occurrence during business turndowns, such as occurred last year, is for companies to analyze prices and costs, trim staffs and see only that business which offers a healthy rather than questionable profit.

Eager for Business

In the past, however, such companies usually were eager for business when the economy resumed moving ahead. Some would even beef up their staffs once again in anticipation of orders.

The buyer for a steel fabricator suggests that the agents themselves might have something to do with their problem. "Many buyers request quotations merely to check prices and update their records," he said.

Knowing this to be so, cautious sellers presumably feel that if no business is to result from their bids they might just as well save the time, money, effort and paperwork involved.

The chief criticism of the Price Commission was that suppliers are having trouble interpreting its rulings on increases and so prefer not to quote figures they may not be able to meet profitably, O'Connor said.

Although it wasn't an explicit finding, it was hinted also that some suppliers might be reluctant to formally record their price quotations with the commission looking over their shoulders.

In general, however, the likeliest explanation to emerge from the study is that suppliers remain cost-conscious, more selective, and less interested in volume for the sake of volume.

This, of course, is something for which the Price Commission can hardly fault the sellers, the thrust of the Washington controls program being that if you can't raise prices you will be greatly encouraged to cut costs.

Still, O'Connor laments, how would you like to try buying an automobile if the salesman won't tell you the price? In order for a deal to be concluded, he says, you have a beginning and that beginning is the bid.

Humid Heat's Going, Nicer Weather in Sight

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The extreme heat and humidity moved out of the state Sunday and except for a chance of a few thunderstorms in the south, even better weather was predicted for Wisconsin through Thursday.

A cool front passed rapidly across the state Sunday with a band of showers which moved across the southeast in the morning. Skies were partly sunny during the afternoon and temperatures were a little cooler though most highs were still in the 80s. It was partly cloudy to fair overnight and a few showers moved back into the southern part of the state in the morning.

85 in Milwaukee

Highs were expected to range from 78 to 88 today with cooler weather tonight in the 50s and 60s. Pleasant weather with highs in the 70s and low 80s was predicted for Tuesday.

Highs ranged from 88 at La Crosse to 90 at Superior and Park Falls Sunday. Other highs included 87 at Madison and Lone Rock, 85 at Milwaukee, Green Bay, Beloit and Eau Claire and 83 at Wausau.

Overnight lows ranged from 55 at Land O Lakes to 70 at Beloit. Other lows were 56 at Superior, 60 at Park Falls and Marshfield, 62 at Eau Claire and Madison, 64 at Wausau, Lone Rock and Green Bay, 66 at La Crosse and 67 at Milwaukee.

Elsewhere in the nation, the high Sunday was 111 at Needles, Calif., and the low was 46 at Reno, Nev.

Police & Fire Beat

NEENAH — The theft of wheels and tires from foreign cars parked at Valley Import Ltd., Wheeler Road, Town of Neenah, was reported to the Winnebago County Sherriff Department Saturday.

Nels Lawrence, a co-owner of Valley Import, told officers the wheels and tires were taken off cars parked in back of the building.

He reported that two rear tires and rims were taken off a 1971 Austin America automobile. The rims were valued at $23 each, the tires at $27 each. Four minilite rims valued at $96 each were taken off a 1960 Austin Healy Sprite.

Four tires valued at $47 each also were stolen.

Lawrence reported that a car belonging to Steve Stan, 429 W. Foster St., Appleton, was stripped of a shift boot, a rim for a turning signal, one pair of stereo speakers, shift and radio knobs and a gas cap. The value of the items taken is estimated at $50.

The thefts took place Friday.

OSHKOSH — Two valuable antique lamps displayed at a private shop in the Mansion, 2230 Rvf Road, Town of Oshkosh, were smashed Saturday night.

Pauline Garrison, 807 Wisconsin Ave., Kaukauna, a co-proprietor of one of the Mansion's shops, called Winnebago County officers Sunday to report the breakage.

She told officers that when she left her shop Saturday evening, she locked the doors and windows and everything was secure. When she returned Sunday, however, the two lamps were broken.

One of the lamps was a stain glass inverted hand painted a cranberry hobnail crystal prism lamp valued at $375. lamp worth $275. The other was

There was no sign of forced entry to the shop or to the Mansion itself. Nothing else in the shop or the building was disturbed.

Marine Corp. Income Down

Bank Holding Firm Reports Profits for Quarter, 6 Months

The Marine Corp., Milwaukee-based bank holding company of which Marine National Bank of Neenah is a member, has reported net income losses for the second quarter and six-month period of 1972, compared with net income for the same periods last year.

Net income for the second quarter this year totaled $812,972, or 66 cents per share, compared with $823,245, or 68 cents, for the same quarter in 1971. Net second quarter income before securities gains and losses increased to $796,886, or 65 cents, from $727,101, or 59 cents, for the same period last year.

For the first six months of 1972 net income before securities gains and losses was $1,734,200, or $1.42 per share, compared with $2,044,262, or $1.67, for the first half of last year. Net income was $1,762,373, or $1.44, this year as against $2,267,400, or $1.86, in 1971.

Loan totals on June 30, 1972, were $485,521,984 compared with $397,833,461 in 1971, and deposits rose to $686,082,315 from $651,987,942 last year.

John C. Geilfuss, chairman and president, said all figures have been restated to include the effect of the acquisition of the Marine Bank of Beaver Dam in July of 1971.

"Continuing strong loan demand coupled with some modest increases in the prime rate should provide a climate conducive to higher earnings during the next six months for our 15 member banks," he said.

Clever Comment Can Make Enemy of Friend

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Are you tired of clinging friends? Would you rather have more good, clean-cut 10 per cent enemies who can't stand the sight of you?

Well, this is one of the easiest things in life to arrange. All you have to do is loose the cutting edge of your tongue, and before you know it, it will create enough feuds, vendettas and dislikes to keep you busy for several generations.

Here are a few remarks guaranteed to cut down your number of pals and add to the rankled ranks of those who would be glad to hang you up by your thumbs:

"I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth."

"I know this is Tuesday and that I promised you on my word of honor that I'd pay you back on Tuesday, but I don't have it now, but I'll give you my word of honor that I'll pay you back next Friday."

No Invitation

"Didn't I invite you to the party? I knew there was somebody I missed, but I couldn't think who it was."

"What I can't figure is how they can call it a merit raise—that is, if they gave you one."

"Yeah, it's a sweet new buggy okay, but I know a guy who got the very same model for three hundred bucks less."

"I guess that as wives go, honey, you've probably got your good points, too, although I'm not sure right now what they are."

"Which one of those kids is yours—not that funny-looking one on the left, is it?"

"You ought to do something about getting rid of that waistline. It makes you look old."

"I don't know why it takes you so long to do anything. Any other man would have been able to get three taxicabs by now."

You Pay

"You pay it, Fred. The smallest I have on me is a $20 bill."

"So you want to see my hole card, do you? Well, put another $15 in the pot and I'll let you take a look."

"How can you go around saying you're 6 feet tall, when I'm taller than you are, and I know that I'm only 5 feet 10?"

"He may be bald now, but when we were going to college together his nickname was 'The Hairy Ape.' Tell them about it, Fred darling."

"I like your new hat. Too bad they didn't have one your size."

"I'll tell you where you're wrong."

"Maybe it's unfair of me to put all the blame on you. After all, you can't pour water from an empty jug."

"You abuse the right of a college graduate to be ignorant."

"The way you eat I should serve you your food in a trough."

"When I married you, I thought that by now you'd be earning at least twice what you are."

"What kind of a spineless jellyfish are you?"

"God must have been asleep when you were born."

Jim Smith Had A Great Time

HAMBURG, N.Y. (AP) — One day a man got fed up with people asking him, "Your name isn't really Jim Smith, is it?"

So he founded a special interest group called the Jim Smith Society.

This weekend the society held its third annual Fun Festival and 50 men named Jim Smith showed up, sporting tee shirts emblazoned "Jim Smith Power." Nearly 300 other persons most of them named Smith, too, joined in the celebration.

The highlight of the giant picnic was a softball game in which 22 players, two umpires and the scorekeeper were all named Jim Smith.

On hand to watch was the society's founder, the Jim Smith from Camp Hill, Pa.

Formerly a police reporter for the Harrisburg Patriot, Smith said he tired of policeman's wisecracks about his name, so he founded the organization.

Smith said the society now has 340 members throughout the United States and the British Commonwealth.

To Your Good Health

Toxemia During Other Pregnancies Is Likely

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had toxemia when I was pregnant with my first child and I was put in the hospital during my ninth month.

My symptoms were high blood pressure and I was overweight due to excess fluids. Will I get toxemia when I become pregnant again? Also, how is toxemia harmful to baby and mother during pregnancy?—J.M.

The exact cause of toxemia is not really known, although it does afflict a good many pregnant women, especially those who have not had early enough pre-natal attention — a very good reason for getting into early contact with a physician.

It is supposed that either an endocrine imbalance or a metabolic disorder is the cause.

A warning of the onset of toxemia in pregnant women is a rise in blood pressure. Often women with high blood pressure are more susceptible to toxemia.

Fluid retention, also associated with it, brings sudden weight gains beyond those to be expected naturally during pregnancy. Swelling in joints is especially noticeable and many women complain of tightened wedding rings and bracelets.

It usually occurs in the last three months of pregnancy, although it can occur as early as the middle three months.

In mild cases, treatment involving diet restrictions (low salt diet), rest and diuretic drugs is sufficient.

In your case, your doctor felt that such treatment was insufficient, and to be on the safe side he had you admitted to a hospital for more intensive care.

Without proper care, toxemia can become a serious matter indeed, leading, in extreme cases, to convulsions.

The practice of examining urine samples throughout pregnancies helps monitor patients for signs of toxemia. Abnormal amounts of albumin in the urine occurs.

I'd say that if you had toxemia during your last pregnancy, you would be a pretty good candidate for it in your next one.

The disorder is more common in areas where inadequate prenatal care is the norm than where good care is available.

It is dangerous both to the mother and the child, often leading to premature delivery.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Shouldn't a baby going on eight months be crawling around the floor and be able to pull its body up and sit up by now? — Mrs. G.P.

Statistics show that about 70 per cent of babies are able to get themselves to sitting positions anywhere between six and nine months. Your baby may be one of those who performs a bit later than others.

Most behavior charts are based on averages of hundreds of infants tested and are not to be interpreted too strictly. Differences of two or three months from one baby to another are not uncommon.

His physician should check his progress in the course of usual periodic visits.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible to become an alcoholic on beer?

We have been married for six years, and every night of those six years my husband has consumed a minimum of three quarts of beer — many times more.

We have a family and I'm concerned. He is 30. — Mrs. R.B.R.

Yes, it is possible. No question about it.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple. Write to Dr. Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent for a copy of the booklet, 'How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains," enclosing a long, self-addressed (use Zip code), stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all mail from his readers, but because of the great volume received daily he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

McGovern Raised by Disciplinarian Parents

Editor's Note—this is the first of three articles on the life of Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern.

By HARRY ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a boy, George McGovern was that nice kid, the one who preferred the piano and his stamp collection to playing kick-the-can. He was a shy one, in his neat, plain clothes and hand-me-down shoes, this slow-speaking, serious son of a minister.

His shyness and a conviction that it was a fault to be conquered propelled young McGovern into becoming a crack high school debater with its demands on logic and facts, commitment and the ability to listen.

And everything that followed sprang from that, as if by some unseen plan for ever-widening horizons: McGovern would learn to revile war while flying bombers, he would try the ministry and be disillusioned by its businesslike ways, he would be a professor for the give-and-take with the young.

Practical Politics

And he would turn a social conscience to practical politics, first in the House of Representatives, then as a food-for-peace administrator, then as antiwar senator, and finally—in the shambles of 1968 Chicago—decide unhesitatingly that 1 972 would be his year to lead a dramatically different Democratic Party back into the White House.

The George McGovern, turning age 50, who stood before the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach and said "come home America," is the issue and product of small-town, middle-class America of the Depression, the son of a Methodist preacher who followed the hard credo of John Wesley.

Joseph McGovern, the father, had followed the Dakota-fever pioneers who settled the northern prairies. He was so successful in a spiritual, but not financial, way that he built a half dozen churches in North Dakota.

Oldest Boy

Joseph's first wife died childless. He was 48 when he married again in 1919 to a woman 20 years his junior and Frances McLean McGovern bore him two girls and two sons. George, delivered by Dr. James Hollingsworth in the bedroom of the Avon, S D. parsonage—was the oldest boy.

"He was a bright and curious child and often wandered off from the others—usually in the company of some stray dog," says Mrs. Grace Kiehlbach, whose children played with George McGovern. Mostly, those who knew McGovern then, remember him that way: a nice, moral withdrawn youngster.

Moved to Mitchell

George was 6 when the family moved to Mitchell, a South Dakota town of 14.000. His father was a stern disciplinarian, one who earned respect more than love, requiring that his children learn to read aloud from the Bible, even before they entered school.

"His was not a message of fear or a gospel of retribution," writes Robert Sam Anson in "McGovern," a biography.

"McGovern dwelled instead on the meaning of faith. He saw faith as a builder of character. Fear and temptation, he told his children, were the same: both could be overcome by faith and discipline."

It was in such an atmosphere that the future nominee spent his youth. In the first grade, although he could already read, George shied from reading aloud. His teacher, mistaking withdrawal for slowness, almost held him back.

Encouraged by Teacher

But as a high school sophomore, his intelligence and application caused an English teacher to encourage George to try out for the debate team.

His high school history teacher and debate coach, S. Robert Pearson, recalls that "the most interesting thing about George was his friendship and acceptability by everyone. He was never part of any clique or particular set, but was respected by all the kids... He and his debating colleagues were always out to define the truth and they did it with such zeal that they frightened most students they debated with."

He was a fine student, involved in school activities, but nobody remembers him as a big-man-on-campus. Principal George Janke, now semi-retired in Mitchell, says he was "clean cut a fine gentleman in every respect, modest, unassuming, not a pusher.

The 1940 school yearbook lists: glee club 3 years; extemporaneous speaking 2 years; debate 3 years; class play "When Stars Shine"; Vocations Club 1 year; Class Board 1 year." and as a final summing up of George McGovern's tenure in Mitchell high, there was this line: "For a debater—he's a nice kid."

Forensic Scholarship

McGovern's partner in those years was Eddie Mizel, as quick and clever as McGovern was deliberate and meticulous. They began winning as McGovern won a forensic scholarship to Dakota Wesleyan University in Mitchell.

"It really changed my life, no question about it," biographer Anson quotes McGovern. "If I had not gone out for debate, there is not a chance in the world, in my opinion, that I would have ever come to the United States Senate. It was the one thing that I could do well. It really became the only instrument of personal and social power that I had."

Thirty miles northwest of Mitchell, in Woonsocket, McGovern and Mizel met the Stegeberg twins, Ila and Eleanor.

"There were many debates," recalls Ila Stegeberg Pennington, "but only one that we won. "The relationship with him (George) then was purely in a detached way, as a debater from Mitchell He was an excellent debater, not only as a speaker, but he was also so thorough in his presentations. He had all the facts and figures."

Discussing Politics

The twins were from a motherless home, reared by their grandparents. Their father, Earl, disenchanted by the ups and downs of farm prices, turned Democrat and eventually became county chairman. As Eleanor said later: "I grew up thinking that the only way one spent a Sunday afternoon was discussing and debating politics."

Ila remembers that George had come a long way then from the extreme shyness of his younger days. "I think probably he still has a bit of that," she says now. "I don't know if he's ever gotten over it."

After that one loss, George and his partner returned many times to Woonsocket and bested the Stegeberg sisters in debate. McGovern met the girls again when all three were freshmen at Dakota Wesleyan a 500-enrollment conservative liberal arts college.

No One Else

"After that there was really no one else," Eleanor recalls. They were married by McGovern's father while he was on leave from primary flight training in 1943.

When World War II broke out, McGovern was 19 and in his sophomore year. He was serving the first of three years as class president and gaining widening recognition as a debater. A speech called "My Brother's Keeper" was chosen one of the 12 best of 1942 in the United States by the National Council of Churches.

Eleanor followed as her husband completed training as a bomber pilot. When he was sent to Italy in February 1944, she returned to South Dakota to await the first of their five children.

Lt. McGovern, then 22, was captain of a B24 Liberator bomber called the Dakota Queen. He prided himself on never missing a mission, and even flew when his father died of a heart attack in December 1944.

Flight Medal

The Dakota Queen was one of 400 bombers enroute to blast Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, cruising at 25.000 feet when two of its four engines quit. McGovern coaxed the crippled ship over the target, and made an emergency landing on the island of Vis, on a strip barely long enough for fighters. For his "intrepid spirit, outstanding ability and rare devotion to duty," McGovern was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

In all, McGovern flew 35 missions. On the last, his plane was hit by flak, blowing out the nose, brakes and hydraulic system. For bringing the ship in, McGovern won the Air Medal

Home again, with a family to support, McGovern returned to Dakota Wesleyan. He studied history, with the idea of becoming a teacher. He delved into philosophy and theology, one day quietly abandoning his father's fundamentalists Wesleyan orthodoxy to become a regular Methodist.

World Government

As his thinking changed, before his senior year was out, he told Eleanor he would become a minister. Taking up debating once more, he advocated world government, in the way of many soldiers who return home convinced their war must be the last.

Before graduation, McGovern was accepted at Garrett Theological Seminary, near Northwestern University in Illinois. At the same time he became a student minister at Diamond Lake, Ill.

What he sought was to write sermons, instead he found a minister held a lot of hands, listened to a lot of sad stories. He was interested in touching lives; he felt the church was more interested in gaining members.

In late 1947, McGovern yielded to the history professors at Northwestern who wanted him to become a teacher. In the first year, finances were tight for a family that now had two children. They eased in the second when McGovern received a teaching fellowship. He was exposed to liberalism at Northwestern

Wallace Backer

When Henry Wallace decided to strike out for the presidency on the Progressive Party ticket in 1948, McGovern became an adherent.

"One searches his official biography in vain for some mention of the man or McGovern's regard for him," says Anson in his study of McGovern. But, he adds, "intellectually, emotionally, politically, McGovern was committed to Wallace and to what he perceived as the cause he stood for."

McGovern wrote the Mitchell Daily Republic: "I'm tired of listening to the thoughtless jeers and charges of 'crackpot' and 'Communist' being thrown his way. If someone doesn't come to my rescue soon, I'm going to be forced to vote for the 'crackpot' next November."

McGovern went to the Progressive Party convention and was appalled to find the Communist influence he thought had been only a smear was showing itself clearly. He was so soured by election time that he didn't vote at all.

Recognize China

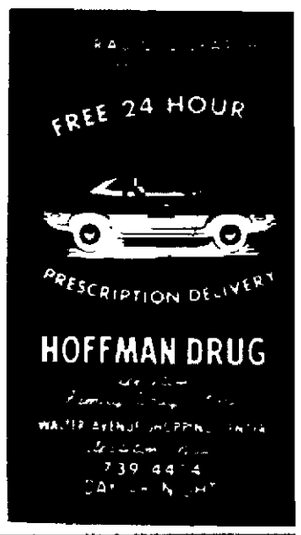

His graduate studies at Northwestern finished, McGovern returned to Dakota Wesleyan—this time as a teacher. He became a student favorite, but not of the school's board or Mitchell's American Legion Post. He worked on his dissertation while teaching and made it known he was for a cease-fire in Korea and recognition of Red China.

When he left, in 1952, students dedicated the Dakota Wesleyan yearbook, Tumbleweed, to him.

"In the short time he has been with us," the dedication read, "George has found a place in the hearts of students both in and out of the classroom. He is one of those capable few who can be associated intimately with the students and share their problems, yet command their respect in the deepest sense of the word . . ."

George McGovern, the minister's son, left the students, about to take his first whack at Democratic Party politics.

Next: McGovern — Organizer, congressman, hunger-fighter and senator.

South Vietnamese Make Gains in Two Directions

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese troops made major advances on two fronts today, fighting their way to the walls of Quang Tri Citadel in the northern counteroffensive and recapturing a second district town on the central coast.

In the air war, American jets bombed the southern sector of Hanoi on Sunday for the second successive day, setting a battery plant on fire and triggering a dozen explosions, the U.S. Command reported. Pilots said smoke rose 4,000 feet over the North Vietnamese capital.

Associated Press correspondent Dennis Neeld reported from Quang Tri that government paratroopers pushed through a hail of North Vietnamese artillery on the approaches to the Citadel, then encountered withering fire through two breaches in the 40-foot walls of the 19th century fortress.

Gaps in Walls

"The North Vietnamese are funnelling their firepower into the gaps in the walls, and it's murder in there," one officer said.

Officers said the South Vietnamese were taking substantial casualties but refused to say how many.

Planting the South Vietnamese flag in the Citadel would symbolize recapture of the northernmost provincial capital which fell to the North Vietnamese on May 1. The South Vietnamese counteroffensive to recapture Quang Tri Province began June 28.

Neeld said the paratroops launched their assault at dawn from a string of bunkers within 50 yards of the Citadel walls, moving behind a heavy artillery and aerial bombardment. The two breaches in the walls had been made two weeks ago by U.S. jets with laser-guided 2,000-pound bombs.

Binh Dinh Province

Meanwhile, in Binh Dinh Province, on the central coast, more than 1,000 South Vietnamese rangers moving on foot and by helicopter recaptured the district town of Tam Quan, Associated Press photographer Neal Ulevich reported. He said the North Vietnamese put up only light resistance.

Before the assault, U.S. destroyers bombarded the town from offshore, did heavy damage and left part of the town in flames.

As the South Vietnamese force moved in, at least 2,000 civilians emerged cautiously from underground bunkers. The troops rounded them up for processing.

Bob Hope and Mrs. Richard Nixon ham it up during a telethon to raise money for victims of recent flooding. The Red Cross and various celebrities manned 200 telephones Saturday. More than $2 million was pledged during the Baltimore telethon.

Natural Resources Monitoring Satellite Goes Into Polar Orbit

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — Their long-awaited satellite tucked in a perfect orbit over the North and South poles, scientists are checking out systems aboard the ERTS spacecraft in preparation for receiving first pictures of the earth Tuesday.

The $176 million spacecraft was launched Sunday from Vandenberg Air Force Base here to begin a year of global environmental measurements that scientists hope will usher in a new era of using space technology to monitor earth's natural resources.

ERTS, which is short for Earth Resources Technology Satellite, thundered aloft atop a white Delta launch rocket that flawlessly boosted the 1,900-pound spacecraft 500 miles above the South Pole and into a circular orbit.

"Everything looks fine—in fact it looks excellent," said Dr. John Clark, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Space-flight Center at Greenbelt, Md. The center will control ERTS during the year in which the 10-foot-long satellite will circle the earth every 103 minutes.

Equipped with three television cameras and a special radiation-sensing device, the spacecraft will photograph the entire globe every 18 days.

Scientists hope to use the pictures to monitor natural resources such as crops, forests, schools of fish, water supplies and grasslands.

They believe the pictures, taken through filters that measure radiation reflected from the planet, can help in mapping, spotting earthquake fault systems and locating mineral and oil deposits.

"This is probably the most important launch of an unmanned satellite NASA has ever made," Clark said after ERTS was separated from the Delta rocket's second stage over the coast of East Africa.

"This mission has more potential to bring direct benefits to the average man than perhaps anything we've done so far in the unmanned space program."

Flight controllers at Goddard plan to spend today and part of Tuesday checking spacecraft systems before the first pictures are taken later Tuesday. They will be made as the butterfly-shaped spacecraft sweeps southward across Canada's Maritime Provinces. In the next orbit, ERTS is expected to take pictures of a swath down the Missouri and Mississippi River valleys.

Priority for Burn Prevention Urged

BY C. G. McDANIEL
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A "silent epidemic" of burns in the United States is killing and crippling more people than polio did in 1954, its peak epidemic year.

Three Texas physicians make this assertion in calling for a national drive to reduce burns "similar to that which was required to control poliomyelitis."

"It is evident that burn prevention should be of high priority in our society," they wrote in an editorial in the July 24 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The physicians are Drs. Armond S. Goldman, Duane L. Larson and Sally Abston, all of the University of Texas medical branch in Galveston.

The doctors said a single government agency should spearhead a coordinated program to seek to reduce burn injuries and deaths.

Redesign Heaters

The suggested steps include: better design and regulation of open space heaters, hot-water heaters and kitchen stoves; education programs through the mass media, and government action to require manufacture of flame - retardant clothing.

"The incidence of burn injuries in the United States exceeds that of every industrialized country, and deaths and crippling due to burns in this country currently are considerably greater than the mortality and morbidity due to poliomyelitis in the peak epidemic year of 1954," they wrote.

National Safety Council statistics show that 6,700 persons died in fires and of burn injuries in 1970, and 250,000 suffered disabling injuries. By contrast, in 1954, about 50,000 persons contracted polio and 1,500 died of it.

Intensive Care

The physicians note that a person burned over 50 per cent of his body requires intensive hospital care for about four months, at a cost of about $36,000. Half of the patients so severely burned die, they added.

The doctors studied 368 children treated at the Shriners Burns Institute in Galveston between 1966 and 1970.

Ninety per cent of these suffered burns at home or in the home neighborhood, they reported. More than half of the cases were found to have been caused by space heaters, usually gas, matches, outdoor fires, gas hot-water heaters and kitchen stoves.

Fifty-four per cent of the children wore combustible clothing, primarily cotton dresses and nightgowns, but shirts, skirts and trousers also were involved, the doctors said.

Gasoline frequently was the combustible liquid involved. Barbecue starters, paint thinners and cigarette lighter fluids were other agents involved.

A survey of 41 adult burn patients over age 60 at the University of Texas medical branch in Galveston "revealed similar results." Cigarettes were added as a cause of burns, and bedding as well as clothing was involved.

Four Newsmen Die in Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — Four more newsmen have been killed in Vietnam, bringing the death toll to six in the four-month-old North Vietnamese offensive.

Canadian photographer Gerard Hebert was hit Saturday by an artillery shell as he ate with South Vietnamese paratroopers near Quang Tri City.

Two television cameramen from Singapore, Terence Khoo and Sam Kai-Fave, and a South Vietnamese army photographer, Tran Van Nghia, were cut down by rifle fire 200 yards off Highway 1 last Thursday. Their bodies were not recovered until Sunday.

Another newsman is missing and 30 have been wounded since the North Vietnamese offensive started March 30.

Newspaper Guild Members Oppose Political Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 300 members of the American Newspaper Guild, a union representing news workers, have opposed the union endorsement of Sen. George S. McGovern for president.

They said in a quarter-page ad in Sunday's Washington Post that the Guild has no business endorsing "any candidate for any office at any time or place."

The ad was signed by 298 editors and reporters in the Washington area, most from The Associated Press, United Press International, The Baltimore Sun, the New York Times, The Washington Post and The Washington Star-News. Other newspapers and agencies also were represented.

The Guild's executive board issued an endorsement of McGovern on July 13 after he won the Democratic nomination in Miami Beach.

But the protesting members said in the ad that, "The Guild has no business interjecting its members into a partisan political role."

The Guild has 33,000 members from newspapers and other media industries and is affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

Spassky Concedes in Sixth Match to Give Fischer Lead

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — American Bobby Fischer, having forged into the lead in his world championship match with Russian Boris Spassky, mused today on the way to overcoming both the Soviet chess monopoly and the antipathy of those chess fans who were annoyed by his capricious behavior.

Fischer took the sixth game of the match Sunday on defender Spassky's home ground, playing an opening variation new to the American but familiar to the Russian. Fischer won with evident ease and bounded into a full point lead, to a storm of applause from the auditorium.

The crowd continued to cheer him outside as he jumped into his green Range Rover. Moments later the humbled champion, Spassky, walked out of the hall. He, too, was cheered, but less enthusiastically. A few days ago it had been the other way around, with most of the cheers for Spassky.

The 29-year-old challenger's protests against everything from food to filming at times seemed likely to blow skyhigh this richest of chess matches, and both Icelanders and visiting Americans were furious. Now that Fischer has overcome the deficit he had incurred by forfeiting one game, fans are taking a more tolerant view.

"There's something about that fellow," said an Icelandic shookeeper.

Even Chet Forte, flown in from the Munich Olympic site to oversee the chess filming, had a kind word for Fischer. Forte had been unable to film Sunday.

"Bobby is immature about a lot of facts of life," said Forte. "He doesn't know how a TV works or anything. And he's impossible to get to, but once you sit down with him, you can change your opinion of him."

Fischer's slashing attack Sunday night forced Spassky to resign after 41 moves.

They go into the seventh game Tuesday with Fischer leading 3½ to 2½. With 18 games still to be played, Fischer needs a total of 12½ points to take the title, while Spassky needs only 12 to retain it. A win counts one game point and a draw a half point.

Fischer had never beaten Spassky before they came to Reykjavik, but he did it for the third time Sunday, winning roars of applause from about 2,000 spectators.

Playing with the white chessmen, the American challenger opened with a move he has rarely used. Arriving 10 minutes after his clock was started, Fischer moved his queen's bishop pawn two squares forward. In all of his important games, Fischer had seldom opened with anything but his king's pawn.

Contained Surprise

Experts were surprised. Many said this must have jarred Spassky but the Russian did not show it if he was rattled.

International grandmaster Isaac Kashdan said in an analysis for The Associated Press that "it was Fischer all the way," using one of Spassky's favorite offensives, known as the Queen's Gambit Declines.

From the seventh move, Fischer was able to build an advantage in a series of exchanges that left Spassky with hanging pawns. He attacked Spassky's weak queenside pawns, then switched the attack to the kingside.

Fischer was able to exchange his knight for the black bishop and advanced quickly on the king's side. With Fischer's queen and bishop able to operate on two good diagonals, Spassky was soon reduced to helplessness, Kashdan said.

Lost Chance

After Fischer's 26th move, the American's rooks joined the attack. Spassky slowed down his moves and experts said he had lost his chance of a draw.

With 20 minutes playing time left after his 41st move, Spassky stopped his clock and gave Fischer his hand, meaning he was conceding.

The American briskly signed the scoresheet and left the stage while Spassky, looking dejected, chatted a few moments with the referees.

Some of the experts felt Fischer has now succeeded in outpsyching Spassky in the war of nerves accompanying the match.

The Russian champion had appeared genial and collected in the early stages in Iceland, when Fischer delayed the match for nine days to demand more prize money, then lost the first two games, the first on an error and the second by forfeit while protesting filming of the competition.

Spassky has been losing his cool since then, many of the top chesswatchers are saying. He lost for the first time to Fischer in their third game, drew the fourth and dropped the fifth with a mistake on his 27th move.

Audience Researcher Explains About Ratings

Dick Cavett Has Big Audience, Yet Runs Poor Third in Late Night Race

BY PAUL KLEIN

During Cynthia Lowry's vacation, the column is being written by invited guests, each of whom was asked to respond to specific questions. Here is the report of a man who when he was NBC's vice president in charge of audience research, worked with surveys, projections and polls to match up programs and audiences. He is still doing it, as president of a television production company

Q. When a television program is canceled or threatened with cancellation, it is usually because of "low ratings." How accurate are the ratings? How low must a rating be to result in cancellation?

A Let's get down to the Dick Cavett thing (ABC will drop the show if it doesn't pick up audiences) and discover what the problem is. The sample Nielsen report, which is as accurate a measure of the "home" audience as there is, shows that Cavett was viewed by 2,170,000 TV homes per minute for the five days ending May 19th. It takes the Mets a whole season of 80 home games to attract an audience like that—and little old failing Dick Cavett attracts that audience for the average minute of his program! But CBS late night movie has double that audience—4,280,000. And Johnny Carson even more than that, 4,350,000. If you judge Dick Cavett by audience, he is a poor third.

Percentage Counts

Three late night programs attracting exactly the same type of audience can only be judged by audience size. If Dick Cavett does not get his fair share of that audience (25 per cent, although he is only getting 14 per cent) then CBS and NBC are getting the benefit of the other viewing that takes place during the late night.

My theory is that people decide to watch television (late at night and or any time) and then choose among the three late night offerings. If Cavett is not getting it. Carson and or the movie are. The Nielsen sample reflects exactly that phenomenon.

How can you throw off a program that has over two-million homes and 3,750,000 people viewing it per minute? You can if it only fills up half the house. The "late night house" requires that six-million people view per minute. ABC finds that nearly half its house is empty.

The Yankees now play to 10,000 people in a 65,000-seat ball park. If they played in a 9,000-seat ball park, they would be a huge success with 1,000 standees. They do not play in that size ball park and therefore they are a failure in terms of their own criterion. Cavett is a failure by the over-the-air limited spectrum criterion.

How it Goes

Television demands that you fill up your portion of the house If you do not, advertisers will pay you less for advertising time in the program and they will pay the competition more money for its time, since the audience you should have has gone to it

When a program is not getting as much audience as another program in the same time period, the boosters of the first program look behind the gross home numbers to determine if the quality of their audience (younger, richer, etc.) is better than the audience of the higher-rated program and is therefore a better advertising buy.

The Cavett people would have to show that their quality index is twice as high as the movie index. This is impossible since the movie audience is well documented and of very high quality. I'm the guy who promoted all this demographic stuff so I know when it works and when it doesn't.

Special Looks At Indian in U.S. Today

BY TV SCOUT

7-8 Channels 11-9 — The Mooday Night Special looks at the American Indian, how he fits into the modern world and how he views his cultural heritage on "The American Indian: This Land Was His Land." The special covers two diverse Indian lifestyles — life on desolate reservations where Indians face economic poverty. Scenes shift from medicine men curing the sick with sand paintings, old people making their livings as weavers or silversmiths, to the modern workings of the Tribal Council and Bureau of Indian Affairs.

7-8 Channel 5 — Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In pulls out the stops with this repeat of its 100th show. Dan Rowan told TV Scout he thinks this is far and away the program's funniest show. All of this season's performers are on hand, plus most of the important alumni (only Goldie Hawn, Chelsea Brown and Dave Madden are missing). John Wayne is the big newcomer and you'll roar as he makes like Henry Gibson reciting a poem and succumbs to Tiny Tim's mighty handshake. (R)

7-8 Channels 2-7 — Denny Miller plays a huge man thought to be a mass murderer on Gunsmoke We know better, because we see how kind he has been to little Erin Moran, whose family was the one wiped out. When the man finally comes to trial, with Newly (Buck Taylor) as his attorney, there's something about him that haunts Dr. Chapman (Pat Hingle). (R)

8-8:30 Channels 2-7 — Rich Little is on Here's Lucy, playing Jimmy Stewart. John Wayne and Jack Benny in a funny segment. He does the imitations as radio spots for Harry's (Gale Gordon) employment agency Of course, Lucille Ball has conned Harry into thinking he has "peeperpoopers." so his eyes are bandaged and he thinks the voics belong to the real people. Jack Benny shows up for the punch line. (R)

8-10 Channel 5 — World Premiere: Double Play has two pilots, one of which sold It's "Ghost Story," with Sebastian Cabot as the owner of an elegant hotel (the Hotel del Coronado, near San Diego, is used) who tells us the weird tale It involves Barbara Parkins and David Birney as a young couple who move into their new home in the country where the wife finds terror The second offering is "Movin' On," with Patrick Wayne (John's son) and Geoffrey Deuel (the late Pete's lookalike brother) as friends who take to the road They land in Salt Lake City, where they meet a pretty girl (Kate Jackson, a good newcomer), who wants to be a Mormon missionary

9-10 Channels 2-7 — Suspense Playhouse has "Higher and Higher," an elderly pilot film notable only because it stars Dustin Hoffman and Sally Kellerman as lawyers. (R)

Belle of the Lake, carrying more than 300 persons, churns the waters of Lake Geneva in Wisconsin in an old-fashioned "riverboat" race over a five-mile course. Competing Lady of the Lake, in the background, lost to the Belle, largest excursion boat on the lake. (AP Wirephoto)

Kentucky Finds Mercury Level In Fish Is Down

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mercury concentrations in fish samples taken from Pickwick and Kentucky lakes are declining, the Tennessee Valley Authority reports.

TVA officials noted the mercury in fish caught in the two lakes in 1970 and traced the apparent source to mercury discharged into the Tennessee River by the Diamond Alkali Co plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala.

The company installed improved waste controls at its plant to eliminate the discharge

Since then, TVA said recently there has been a gradual reduction in the amount of mercury that reaches the fishes' food chain in the lakes

The problem should disappear in five to seven years, the authority said, as new sediment seals off the mercury-bearing deposits on the bottom of the lakes

Police and Fire

KAUKAUNA — Firemen were called to the Willard Keil home, 509 N Margaret St., about 9:50 p.m Friday after a short in a television set caused the set to begin smoking

Wires inside the set were scorched but the fire was out when firemen arrived

GOP Needs Blacks: Delegate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev Walter Fauntroy, Democratic congressional delegate from the District of Columbia, says the time has come when the Republican party can no longer ignore blacks.

Fauntroy said that "the arithmetic" of the power of the nation "is that unless the Republican party gets 20 to 25 per cent of the black voters either to stay home, and thus not vote Democratic, or to vote Republican, they're in trouble."
